Farm Equipment Takes Center Stage At Penn State's Ag Progress Days

Although the number and diversity of Ag Progress Days exhibitors has grown each year, organizers have not lost sight of the show's roots, said event manager Bob Oberheim. "This show has a long tradition of being a true agricultural exposition," Oberheim said. "Our show is unique in that the overwhelming majority of our exhibitors are directly ag-related." Oberheim expects more than 350 commercial exhibitors in 2002. Thousands of visitors flock to Rockspring each year. This view is from an Ag Progress Days in the past, looking down Main Street. ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The 2002 edition of Penn State's Ag Progress Days, set for Aug. 20-22 at the Larson Research Center, continues the tradition of bringing farmers and other agricultural producers together with the latest in equipment and technology.

Although the number and diversity of exhibitors has grown each year, organizers have not lost sight of the show's roots, said event manager Bob Oberheim.

"This show has a long tradition of being a true agricultural exposition," Oberheim said. "Our show is unique in that the overwhelming majority of our exhibitors are directly ag-related. Other ag shows on the East Coast may have higher numbers than we do, but they also have exhibitors of the flea-market line, or arts and crafts."

Oberheim expects more than 350 commercial exhibitors in 2002, featuring the latest technology, goods, and services. Vendors will showcase everything from buildings, equipment, seed and fertilizer to insurance, fences, and crop consulting services.

This year also will feature more field machinery demonstrations than last year, Oberheim said — as many as time permits.

"We feel this is an important part of the show — providing something new and educational

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Glenn Shirk is often accused of being a workaholic.

"But I have a hard time looking at this as work. It's satisfying working in a field you enjoy," Shirk said of the long hours he devotes as Lancaster County Extension dairy agent.

For 41 years, Shirk has labored on behalf of dairy farmers, helping them become better managers, more successful, and adapt to technological changes in a responsible matter.

On Sept. 30, Shirk will retire from extension.

It's not a change without quite a bit of trepidation.

"This is all I know," Shirk said of his career that started with extension even while he was still in college.

Shirk grew up on a small dairy farm in Quarryville. He participated in a variety of 4-H clubs for 10 years, and at Solanco High School took the vocational agriculture course.

"My 4-H leaders, extension agents, and teachers had a considerable influence on me," Shirk said.

He liked dairy farming. But the family farm was not large enough for him to stay there. Because learning came easy to him, Shirk decided to go to college, although he had no specific career goal in mind.

Becoming a veterinarian appealed to him, but the formidable cost of education and the years of required study discouraged him from pursuing that course.

During the summer of 1958, Shirk worked as a 4-H summer assistant in Huntingdon County, and the following summer in Mifflin County.

"The summer extension jobs showed me opportunities. It was the next best thing to managing a dairy farm. I knew I was more farmer- than research-oriented," Shirk said.

After achieving a degree in dairy science at Penn State, Shirk decided to broaden his education by continuing for a master's in the same field of study.

After attaining a master's degree, Shirk became assistant county agent for 4-H and dairy in Somerset County.

After two years there, Shirk said, "Uncle Sam decided he needed me." Shirk served a two-year stint with the U.S. Army, stationed in Germany.

When Shirk returned to the states, he accepted an interim position as assistant county agent in Snyder County. When that ended, he was appointed county agent for Chester County, where he remained for 15 years, from 1964-1979.

When the position opened up with the Lancaster Extension in 1979, Shirk applied. He said, "The opportunity to specialize in dairy appealed to me."

The county had more than

Drought C[illegible]

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) - Citing worsening drought conditions, the Susquehanna River Basin Commission (SRBC) urged the basin's water users to continue conserving water to reduce the demand on the shrinking supplies.

SRBC endorses and has been actively promoting the drought emergency declarations in effect in the lower Susquehanna region as issued by Pennsylvania Gov. Mark Schweiker earlier this year on Feb. 12 and by Maryland Gov. Parris Glendening April 5. The Pennsylvania counties located entirely or partially in the Susquehanna basin that are under the commonwealth's drought

East Fluid Milk And Cream Review

Madison, Wis.
August 14, 2002
Report Supplied by USDA

Spot prices of class II cream, dollars per lb. butterfat: F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: 1.3552-1.4244. Delivered Equivalent: Atlanta: 1.3552-1.4343 mostly 1.3849-1.4244.

PRICES OF CONDENSED SKIM, dollars per lb. wet solids, F.O.B. producing plants: Northeast: Class II, includes monthly formula prices: .9750-1.0200; Class III - spot prices - .8700-.9200.

SPOT SHIPMENTS OF GRADE A MILK: FLORIDA: This week - In 68, Out 0; last week - In 52, Out 0; last year - In 116, Out 0. SOUTHEAST STATES: This week - In 0, Out 0; last week - In 0, Out 0; last year - In 166, Out 0.

Regional Milk Market Administrators announced the following, July 2002 uniform prices: Northeast $12.05, Mideast $10.85, Southeast $12.55, Florida $14.19, and Western New York (a state order) $11.89 at the base city or county in the orders. Hot and humid weather is encouraging lower milk production volumes in the Northeast while lower temperatures in the Southeast support slightly higher milk volumes. Renewed bottling interest for school sessions is encouraging milk movement into bottling in the South. Many schools in the Northeast will not re-open until after the Labor Day holiday, resulting in less Class I utilization due in part to lackluster retail sales. To satisfy southern milk demands, northeastern and southwestern milk is being shipped into the area. However, this week Florida took in lower milk volumes than anticipated at 68 loads.

Fluid milk movement into ice cream and other Class II facilities is generally good yet less than seasonally expected. Cheese facility interest in fluid milk is generally good while fluid movement into NDM facilities is beginning to wane, especially as some plants close operations until milk volumes significantly increase.

Condensed skim supplies are in balance to tight. Most condensed skim movement is contractual for the good Class II and III interest.

Cream supplies are generally tight with volumes anticipated to increase as more milk is bottled for school sessions. Multiples are trending higher. However, with the lower CME AA butter average reported, cream prices are lower. Demand for cream is steady into cream cheese and ice cream facilities. Churning activity is light for the mostly contractual interest.

NASS pasture and range conditions for selected Eastern states reported at a percentage of 30% or greater are very poor: DE, MD, PA, NC, VA; Poor: GA, RI, NJ, NY, VA, NC; Fair: AL, AR, CT, GA, LA, NH, NJ, NY, RI, WV and Good: AL, AR, FL(80%), ME(71%), MA, MS, NH, VT, WV. VT had the largest percentage rating for excellent pasture and range conditions at 21%.

OPINION

Full Slate

Next week we are granted the privilege of attending what we believe is the "show of shows" of field days for Northeast and Mid-Atlantic agriculture: Penn State's Ag Progress Days.

We could spend three days at the event and come back with stories to fill three months' worth of issues, if we could only be everywhere at once.

Besides Ag Progress, we are in the midst of Fair Season, and we cover quite a few fairs in the next several months. We are planning additional fair coverage — some areas of which we have not visited in quite some time.

When you see our staff in the field, let them know what you think of Lancaster Farming. More importantly, let them know how we can provide a better paper. To survive, we ask for, seek out, and need reader input. We can't serve you better unless we hear from you.

And this editor won't rest. Sometimes editors get accused of sitting in the office, moving papers. Yes, they do that, too, but the editor of Lancaster Farming believes that to stay in touch, he has to be out of the office, in the trenches with the troops. So perhaps you'll see me at several fairs and field days.

We have planned upcoming coverage of Elizabethtown Fair, Allentown and others throughout the region. If we can't make it to your fair, we might have a correspondent who can. If not, there are always reliable 4-H extension agents who can send the material in, and we always are very thankful for that.

I hope you learn as much as we have, throughout the years, at Ag Progress Days. We hope to see you there!

And have fun at the fairs!

Now Is The Time

By Leon Ressler

Lancaster County Extension Director

To Harvest Corn Silage At The Right Moisture Level

Extension dairy agent Glenn Shirk reminds us moisture level at time of harvest is one of the most important factors affecting silage quality because it has such a big effect on how well the silage ferments.

Determining moisture levels can be very tricky this year! It may not be as dry as what you think, based on how many dry leaves you see. Remember, the dry leaves may represent only a small percentage of total plant weight, and thus have only a small impact on total plant moisture.

Most of the weight is in the ear and stalk. A stalk that is still green may contain 75 to 80 percent moisture or more, but as hot, dry weather persists, and as the plant speeds to maturity, moisture levels can drop rapidly. Under more normal conditions, as the corn approaches the ensiling stage, whole plant moisture drops about 0.65 percentage units per day. So, if moisture is at 72 percent it would take about 11 days for it to drop to 65 percent (7 point drop/0.65 = 11 days).

This year, there also is a lot of variation from section to section within fields, and as you try to determine the average condition of the field, consider the size of the area affected and also its yield potential. For example, if it represents 50 percent of the field, but its yield potential is only 50 percent of the rest of the field it only has a 25 percent impact on the field's average condition (0.50 x 0.50 = 0.25).

So, the message is, check the pollination of your fields if there is no grain you can salvage the crop as silage, chop several stalks and determine their moisture content, or at least monitor the moisture condition of the stalks, determine the average condition of the field, and be "ready to roll" when the crop is ready.

A simple way to check moisture is to take 10 ounces of the chopped sample and dry it in a warm but not hot oven or a microwave oven that is on a low setting. Weigh the sample fairly often and when it stops losing weight, you are finished driving off the moisture. If you continue to heat the sample after it is dry, you could burn up dry matter and get an incorrect moisture reading. Therefore it is important to check the moisture fairly often to make sure you don't miss the point when the sample is dry. Weigh the dry sample. The number of ounces of dry weight times 10 is the percent dry matter. The moisture content in percent is simply 100 minus the percent dry matter.

To Protect You And Your Family From Silo Gas

Each year farmers face the danger of silo gas, but this year's drought is likely to make the problem worse. This threat has been around since the first use of silos and it is easy to take shortcuts or become complacent about the dangers associated with silo filling.

The fact that many have worked around this for years without a problem contributes to not taking this seriously. However, a simple mistake could cost you your life, so take the time to use adequate precautions.

Silo gas is formed by the natural fermentation of chopped forages in the silo. Several gases are formed and the type of silo the forage is stored in determines the amount of different gases. In a conventional or open-top silo, nitrogen dioxide is the major gas formed. This gas is characterized by a strong bleach-like odor and low-lying yellow, red, or dark brown fumes. It reaches a peak about three days after filling and quickly begins to decrease shortly thereafter, especially if the silo is ventilated. After two weeks it is unlikely that any more gas will be formed, but some could still be present if it was trapped and unable to escape the silo.

Ideally everyone should avoid the silo during the critical period when gases are forming. Since this is not always possible, it is best to use a self-contained breathing apparatus when entering during the danger period. This is the only breathing device that is certain to protect you from all silo gases. Dust masks or even chemical cartridge respirators do not provide sufficient protection and are not intended to be used where gases are extremely toxic or where the air has been replaced by gases such as carbon dioxide.

If you do not have access to a self-contained breathing device, it is possible to enter the silo safely if the following precautions are followed. First, ventilate the silo and adjacent areas by running the blower 15-20 minutes before entering. All doors should be opened down to the level of the settled silage and the windows in the feed room should be opened. Leave the blower running the entire time you are inside. Never enter the silo unless another adult is present who can go for help if needed. This person should maintain visual contact with you.

Although it will not protect you from silo gases, wear dust mask or some other respirator to protect your lungs from the high concentrations of dust and mold spores, which are found in silos. Keep children away from the silo room and keep it well ventilated all through the time when silo gas could be formed.

To Learn About Invasive Species At Ag Progress Days

Plots of corn, soybeans, hay, and other crops will be growing all around the Crops and Soils Tent at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22 at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center. But one of this year's most intriguing crops will be plants that no self-respecting farmer wants to grow.

Along with grain and forage crops, Penn State crop and soil sciences faculty will be growing common weeds of Pennsylvania, including some invasive weed species. "Invasive weeds are becoming more of a concern to land managers and farmers," said Greg Roth, associate professor of agronomy. "Our display will demonstrate the invasive weeds that are invading crop and forestland around the state. Some of these invasive weeds actually are cultivated species that we should be concerned about escaping into the wild and taking over natural environments."

The area again will present the latest developments in forage, corn and soybean production. Along with demonstrations of new tillage practices and displays of crop research, Penn State specialists will be on hand to talk to producers about crop-related production issues.

Quote of The Week:

"I hope I shall always possess firmness and virtue enough to maintain what I consider the most enviable of all titles, the character of an honest man."

— George Washington

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

THE WISE FOOL

Background Scripture:
Proverbs 15 through 17.
Devotional Reading:
Proverbs 16:16-30.

The wisest people in the world are all "sophomores." The term is derived from two Greek words. The first is "sophos" — or "wise" as in philosophy, love of wisdom. "Moros," on the other hand means "fool," as in "moron," one whose mind is not fully developed. Put them together and you have the "wise fool," one who is wise enough to know that he or she does not know everything. So a sophomore, a second-year student, is one whose mind has been opened to the vast world of knowledge but has not yet grasped all the truth.

The wisest fool of all is the person who realizes he or she will never know it all. The late German Chancellor Konrad Adenuaer complained that "The good Lord set definite limits on man's wisdom, but set no limits on his stupidity." Perhaps that is because getting wisdom usually takes time and effort and many of us want it in sound bytes that can be repeated over and over again without ever gaining any real insight.

These chapters in Proverbs are not meant to be read at one sitting. Each proverb is like a jewel to be looked at from all angles and pondered. As there are so many in these chapters, I have arbitrarily picked out four that are especially challenging to me.

Speak Softly

The first of these is 15:1-7, beginning: "A soft answer turns away wrath, but a harsh word stirs up anger." Thousands of years old, this is just as relevant today. In your own experience you have probably seen how angry words hastily spoken had the same effect as pouring gasoline over a lighted match. What heartache would we escape if we could learn to give the "soft answer' instead of the belligerent one!

Valere and I conduct an intensive premarital weekend two to three times a year at our church. One of the most important sessions is on communication. We try to help them realize that words that come across as a personal attack almost always make things worse. We teach them to express their feelings without attacking and putting the other person on the defensive.

"Better is a little with the fear of the Lord than great treasure and trouble with it. Better is a dinner of where love is than a fatted ox and hatred with it." (15:16,17). This is a challenge to learn what is truly important in life. Many couples, when asked what was the happiest time in their married life, remember when they had little in material goods, but were united in the effort to establish their families. Lack of material wealth did not deny them happiness. Wisdom is learning to realize what is really important in life.

Home Rule

"He who is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he who rules his spirit than he who takes a city" (16:32). People who consciously or unconsciously try to control others may do so because they have never mastered themselves. Instead of ruling others, we need to focus on home rule, taking control of our lives.

Remember Jesus' command to "first take the log out of your own eye, and then you will see clearly to take the speck out of your brother's eye" (Mt. 7:5). Self-control is the highest power of all.

In the last several decades medicine has often confirmed the wisdom of Prov. 17:22: "A cheerful heart is a good medicine, but a downcast spirit dries up the bones." While a cheerful, positive spirit is not medical magic, it can have a very therapeutic effect that can be clinically measured. Jeanne Achterberg and G. Frank Lawlis found in working with burn victims that the underlying attitude of the patient, revealed in simple patient drawings, enabled them to accurately predict which patients would recover more quickly than others. (See Bridges of the Body-Mind, 1970.) Later, they researched other kinds of patients with similar phenomenal results. They demonstrated that a cheerful spirit can help to heal the body, while the downcast spirit can be the ruin and even death of it.

As Rolland Schloerb puts it: "The good medicine of a cheerful heart cannot be brewed in an apothecary shop, encased in a capsule, and swallowed. It is the product of a will that refuses to give way to gloom, and it grows from a faith that all things can be made to work to some good end as one cooperates with God."

A Dry Cow Booster That Costs 7¢ a Day

Hoffmans Horse and Cattle Powder is an ideal tonic for cows over freshening. Feed 6 wks. before freshening. 1 Tablespoon a day. (Two weeks over freshening, feed 1 Tablespoon in the morning & 1 Tablespoon in evening)

Cows will clean better after freshening. Cows have a lower somatic cell count and will have less mastitus problems. Great for reproduction tract and cows will cycle better after freshening. Will help rumen function over freshing. Less feet problems and less stress.

This is an over-all good booster if fed to dry cows, and it will pay you big dividends.

Weekly Dairy Market Outlook

Penn State
August 8, 2002
Farm Bill Basics:
An Overview Of The Dairy Title

- Sign-up begins Aug. 13.
- Few details available.
- Transition payment will likely be $1.04/CWT.

The 2002 Farm Bill, passed on May 13, 2002, has several components that will impact the U.S. dairy industry. The component of most interest to the dairy industry is the dairy price support program and the Milk Income Loss Contract (MILC) program.

USDA announced that sign-up for the new MILC program will begin Aug. 13. Producers should contract their local Farm Services Agency (FSA) office.

Dairy producers will likely receive ~~two kinds of~~ payments under the new MILC program. The first will be a transition payment that will cover the period December 2001 through either August or September 2002. The payment rate for this program through August is $1.04 per CWT. The second type of payment will be monthly payments through Sept. 30, 2005. These payments will be made for months where the Class I price of milk in Boston falls below $16.94 per hundredweight (CWT). Payments will be made only on quantities of milk up to 2.4 million pounds during a fiscal year.

Let's take a closer look at how these deficiency payments will work. Suppose a producer generates 150,000 pounds of milk per month on average. In a year the producer will generate roughly 1.8 million pounds of milk, less than the 2.4 million pound limit. Thus, this producer will receive payments throughout the year on 100 percent of their milk marketings.

What is less clear at this time, however, is what will happen with producers who will exceed the 2.4-million-pound cap in a given fiscal year. USDA will probably release regulations at the time of the sign-up regarding how these producers will qualify for program payments.

As stated earlier, the payments under the MILC program will be determined on a monthly basis. To see how this works, let's take July 2002. The Boston Class I price was $13.87 per CWT. Since this price is below the $16.94 per CWT lower limit specified in the Farm Bill, the producer qualifies for a deficiency payment for the month of July. The payment is computed as 45 percent of the positive difference between the Boston Class I price and $16.94. In this example, the difference is $3.07, and 45 percent of that is $1.38. Thus, our dairy farmer who produces 150,000 pounds of milk each month will receive $1.38 per CWT for the 1,500 CWTs produced during July, or $2,070.

USDA is still sketchy regarding the definition of a "dairy operation." All they are saying for now is the following:

"A dairy operation is any person or group of persons who as a single unit, as determined by CCC, commercially produces and markets cow milk and has production facilities located in the U.S. Producers on dairy operations are not permitted to reconstitute a dairy operation for the sole purpose of receiving additional payments."

Other provisions of the Farm Bill related to dairy include:

- Authorization for a national Johne's disease control program
- Requirements that dairy importers pay a dairy promotion assessment equivalent to that of domestic producers
- Increased funding for dairy and livestock producers under the Environmental Quality In-

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

TUNNEL VENTILATION + AERO COOL™ EVAPORATIVE COOLING = ULTIMATE COW COMFORT

Evaporative Cooling Pad in 76 Cow Tie-Stall Barn
Peach Bottom, PA

Evaporative Cooling for Dairy Tie-stall Barns

The use of evaporative cooling for livestock and poultry in the northeast United States has been gaining acceptance in recent years. The main reason being that producers now understand that during the hottest part of the day, the relative humidity is often very low, which allows for the effective use of evaporative cooling. Since many tie-stall dairy barns now use tunnel ventilation systems for hot weather, dairy farmers can further enhance their hot weather ventilation by adding evaporative cooling pads. These systems work hand-in-hand to increase the amount of heat removed from the cow due to the high air speeds. The cost of the cooling system is minimized when designing it for tunnel ventilation compared to a cross-flow ventilation system.

What is Evaporative Cooling?

When water evaporates, heat energy is converted into a different form, which lowers the temperature of the air or the object that the water was on. As water evaporates the temperature continues to drop until the air reaches the 100% saturated point. In the northeast U.S. there is typically a 16 degree F. cooling potential on an average 90 degree day. Since most evaporative pad systems are designed to be 75% efficient, that means that a 12 degree temperature drop could be expected. When temperatures reach 98 to 100 degrees, there is often a cooling potential of up to 24 degrees, resulting in an 18 degree drop in barn air temperatures. THE HOTTER IT IS, THE MORE COOLING YOU GET!

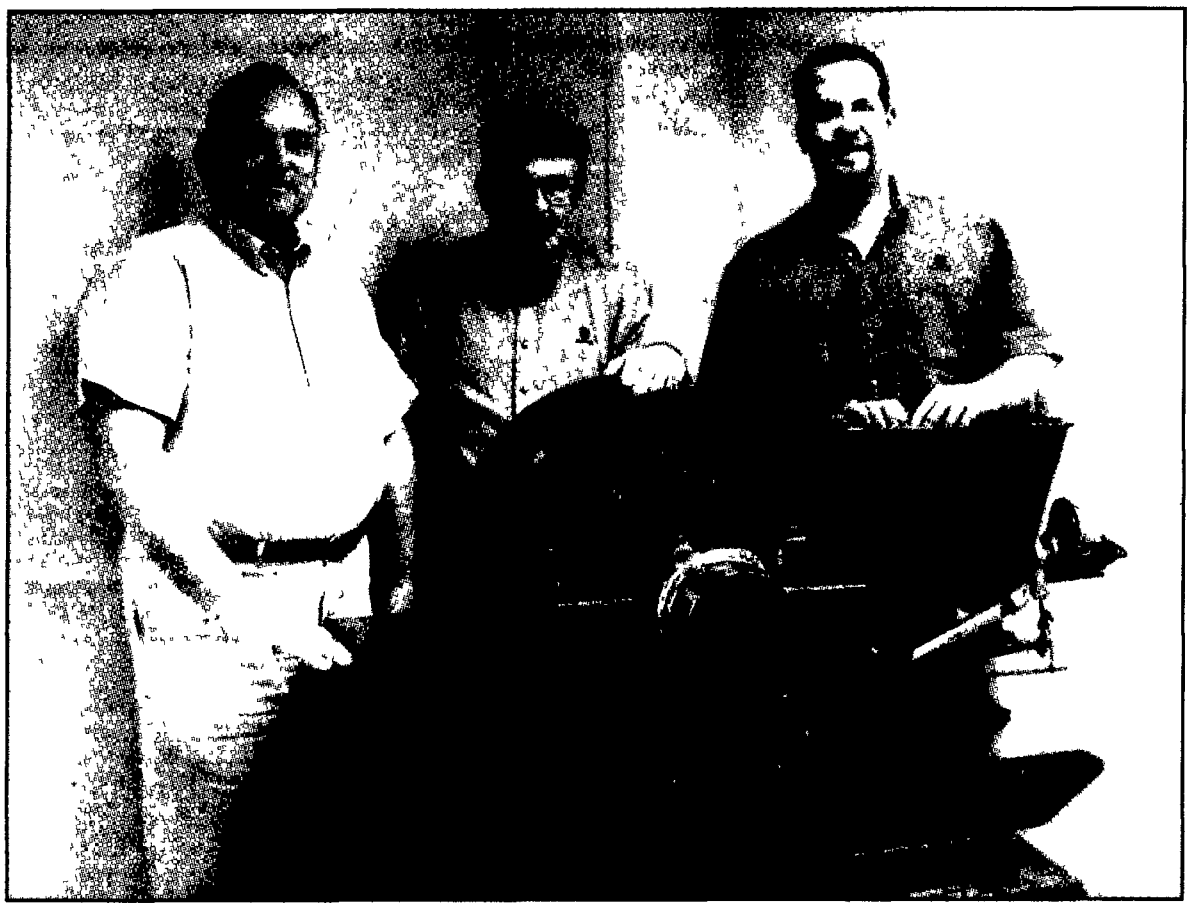
Farm Show 2003 Exhibitor Spotlight

Exclusive to Lancaster Farming



From left Jim Rashford, Paul Smith, and Steve Gorsuch surround an engine made in the early days of New Holland's long history of manufacturing farm equipment. They are planning to fill 5,000 square feet of floor space with equipment at the upcoming Farm Show.

MOUNTVILLE (Lancaster Co) — The Farm Show "is one of the largest total farm shows in America," said Paul Smith, service manager for a New Holland field sales and service office in Mountville.

In light of the comprehensive Farm Show's improved facilities, New Holland is returning to the Farm Show after an eight-year absence.

"The new exhibit area, and having the room to spread out as well as being in a new clean environment," attracted the attention and renewed participation of the New Holland office, according to sales manager Steve Gorsuch.

In addition, the "Farmer Days" planned for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of Farm Show Week "allows us to know that the customer base we wanted to reach would be there at that time," said Smith.

New Holland will have 5,000 square feet of space at the event to exhibit such items as a whole new series of round balers, TM tractors 100-170 HP, new compacts, and TG tractors 170 to 240 HP.

Tractors between 40 and 100 HP will also be on the floor "because they represent the largest farming customer base," said Smith.

According to Gorsuch, company as well as approximately two dealer personnel will be available during the Farm Show. However, staffing will be most concentrated during the Farmer Days, when they will work into the evening hours.

"Basically, we want to try to show the whole product line with a focus on the forage business, which is very important in Pennsylvania," said Gorsuch. "Our goal is to share our product knowledge and what our product line is."

The equipment manufacturer also feels loyalty to Pennsylvania, "the home of New Holland," Gorsuch said. "We wanted to support the show for that reason as well."

Besides answering questions about the equipment, they plan to conduct hour-long seminars addressing the nutritional value of forage during Farmer Days.

To ready themselves for the event, they plan to measure out the exhibit area to make sure that the equipment they are planning to bring to the Farm Show will, in fact, fit.

In addition, the "Farmer Days" planned for Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday of Farm Show Week "allow us to know that the customer base we wanted to reach would be there at that time," said Smith.

Seven people work at the field sales and service office in Mountville.

Typically, three of the sales representatives are on the road at one time, perhaps several days away from the office as they visit approximately 70 dealerships in their area of responsibility — Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware, Maryland, and West Virginia.

There are six U.S. manufacturing facilities producing New Holland. Two manufacturing factories — in New Holland and Belleville — are located in Pennsylvania. Additionally, England, Belgium, Italy, and Mexico also manufacture equipment.

The business began in 1895 in New Holland and was first known as New Holland Machine Company, at first building smaller products like a freeze-proof engine, according to Jim Rashford, sales manager.

In 1940 the business introduced the automatic tie baler, another milestone for the company.

In the mid '40s the business was purchased by the Sperry Corporation and became Sperry New Holland.

When the Sperry group divested, the business was sold to the Ford Motor Corporation. In fact the heritage of New Holland, from the equipment side and from the tractor side, started at the turn of the century. As Henry Ford began working with tractors in the early 1900s New Holland Machine was also in its infancy. Eventually Ford merged New Holland with their own tractor division, and it became known as Ford New Holland.

In 1991 the Ford Motor Company sold most of the business, and later the rest of it, to the Fiat group from Italy.

In 1996 New Holland had its initial public offering on the New York Stock Exchange and began to be traded publicly.

In 1999 New Holland N.V. bought Case Corporation. The two brands have kept separate identities in a "sister company" situation under the corporation entitled CNH Global.

Kutztown Fair Selects Breed, Market Sheep Champions

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — A Dorset ram named Magoo and Oxford ewe named Felicia were named supreme champion breeding sheep Wednesday afternoon here at the Kutztown Fair.

Show judge Matt Trostle, Red Lion, pointed out a buck that "will stand quite a bit of competition in his breed," he said. Gene Snyder, Muhlenberg, exhibited the champion.

Trostle picked a supreme ewe that had a "big, big powerful body, extremely long, extremely deep, and extremely correct," he said, exhibited by Lorissa Lazarus, Breinigsville.

Gene, 11, son of Brian and Doris Snyder, Muhlenberg, exhibited the homebred junior ram lamb, Magoo, to supreme. Gene, in the sixth grade at Muhlenberg Middle School, said this was his first champion at the fair.

The homebred ram is baby bottle fed, with help from Gene's younger brother, Brian Jacob Snyder. Gene said he will be exhibiting at the Allentown and York fairs in addition to the Keystone International Livestock Expo (KILE).

Lorissa Lazarus, 12, is the daughter of Rhonda and Les Lazarus, Breinigsville. Lorissa is in the seventh grade at Springhouse Junior High. This is Lorissa's first champion at Kutztown. She will be exhibiting at Allentown, KILE, and Farm Show.

In the market lamb show Wednesday evening, Emilie Miller won grand champion with her middleweight division lamb, a Suffolk crossbred named "Petey," named in honor of the character in the film, "Remember The Titans."

Emilie, 17, is the daughter of Sheila and Mike Miller, Womelsdorf. Emilie said this is her first year of showing sheep and her first Kutztown 4-H project sheep champion. She plans to show at Oley, KILE, and Farm Show.

Emilie, a senior at Tulpehocken High School, is also vice president of her FFA. She obtained the lamb from B&B Livestock, operated by Barb Banbury, Ohio.

Emilie plans to attend college to study ag education either at Oklahoma State or Kansas State.

Reserve went to Shelby Rarick, 10, with her Hampshire crossbred, the heavyweight grand champion, "Iverson," named for the Sixers basketball star. Shelby, daughter of Keni Anne, Fleetwood, is in the fifth grade at Fleetwood Middle School. Shelby won reserve last year and reserve at Reading.

The reserve was purchased from Ed and Lou Anne Keeny, York.

Grand champion market lamb, the middleweight winner, was "extremely clean and fresh," said Trostle, with an "ample amount of muscling. It's really, really attractive."

The reserve, from the heavyweight division, exhibited "cutability, power, and balance," Trostle said.

Shelby plans to show at the Dutchess County, New York Jackpot Show, Allentown Fair, Oley, Eastern States, Denver, Eastern National, KILE, Louisville, and Farm Show.

Handing out ribbons was new Berks County Lamb and Wool Queen Amber Shollenberger. Amber, 15, daughter of Jeff and Penny Shollenberger, Mohrsville. Amber is in the 10th grade, home schooled. She was crowned at Reading Fair and will exhibit at Oley Fair.

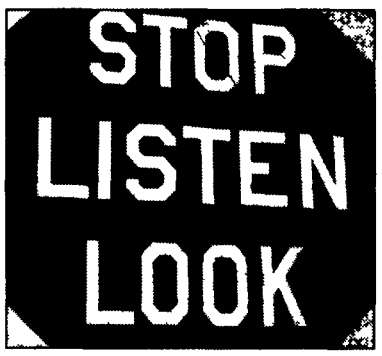
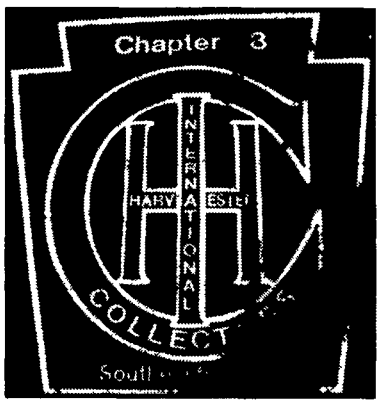
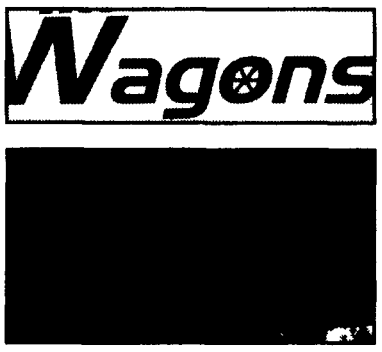
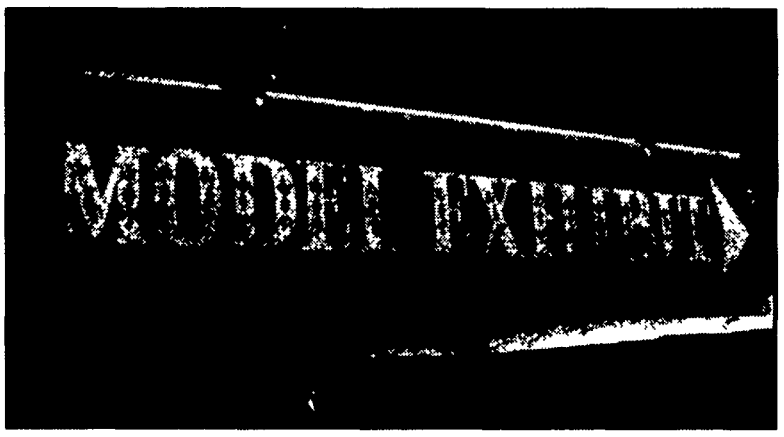
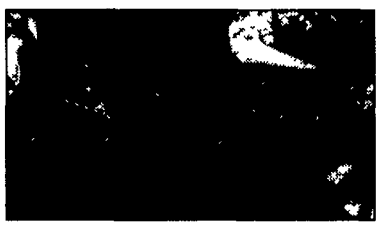
Dust, Steam, Heat, Friends, Fun At Annual Event

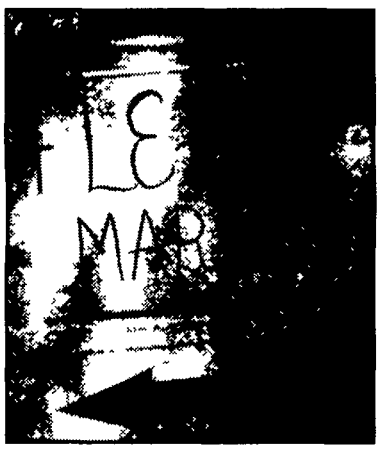


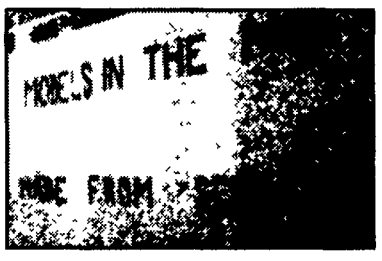


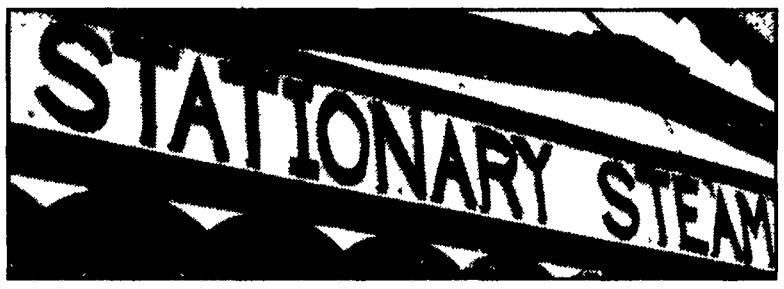


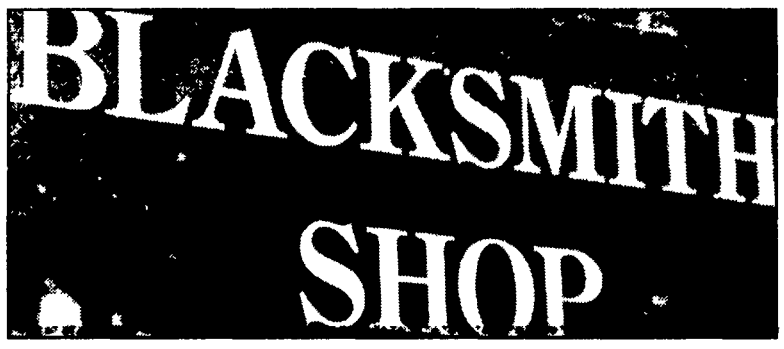


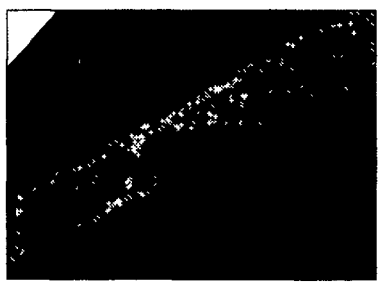












ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

KINZERS (Lancaster Co.) — Ted Brooks weaved carefully around the screaming, rambling steam engines, battling grueling heat, on a mission.

His tall task: snap photos for his grandchild; actually, for his grandchild's entire family living in California.

Hey, they couldn't make it to the event! So, undaunted, armed with a digital camera, Brooks ensured that 1-year-old Kate and parents Doug and Linda Brooks could view the wholesomely historical demonstrations at the famous Rough and Tumble — all via Internet.

Old technology met the new at this year's event, marking the 54th annual Thresherman's Reunion, a time of dust, steam, smoke, and fun on the museum grounds just east of Lancaster.

The Rough and Tumble Engineers Historical Association planned lots of activities during the four-day event Wednesday through Saturday this week. There's an auction set this afternoon along with the presentation of the president's trophy beginning at 2:30 p.m.

There were signs directing tumble-go'ers everywhere on the grounds. Brooks, originally from Redbank, N.J., visits the area with Barbara. Both live in Doylestown.

Brooks noted that he'd like to visit every summer. This year hosted more steam engines than ever before.

Brooks said he remembers his grandfather taking him to the show. Back in the late 1950s, Ted's granddad, Theo Moore, brought a 1915 Stutz Bulldog roadster to exhibit. There were antique and collectible cars also assembled at the site.

This was Brooks' first time at the Rough and Tumble in about 40 years, and he said the site has expanded considerably since then.

At the event, there was some new "old" equipment in action, as well as the large steam tractors. One assembler, Leon Beiler, Honey Brook, was exhibiting his homemade minibaler. The baler operates by belt from a Rumely Oil Pull scale gas engine, homemade with McCormick parts. The chassis is a garden tractor scrounged from parts in 1995. Bound bales measure 5-inch by 7-inch. The homemade minibaler costs about $800, according to Beiler.

National Feeder Cattle Weekly Review

St. Joseph, Mo.
Aug. 9, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

NATIONAL FEEDER & STOCKER Summary for week ending Aug. 9. TOTAL RECEIPTS: 300,800; last week 238,500. Auctions: 209,500; last week 168,100. Direct: 86,800; last week 70,200. Video/Internet: 4,500; last week 200. This week's reported auction volume included 39 percent over 600 lbs and 41 percent heifers.

Compared to last week; yearling feeder steers and heifers sold mostly steady as prices continue to hold their own, in the face of higher corn and a weak fat cattle market. However, many of these feeders remain in firm hands as the current market is below some breakeven levels. Yearling producers are being faced with the decision of taking their hickey now or retaining ownership into the feedlot. Spring calf prices trended steady to 2.00 higher as the receipts are becoming progressively heavier in the Western States. Most of the price advance and improved demand was due to increased quality and size of the offerings. Even the top reputation strings of calves are starting to make their way to town in many drought stricken areas. Ironically, South Dakota ranchers who were gathering calves for market late in the week near Chamberlain, on the Missouri River, had to work in a rainstorm that dropped over 2 inches of too little and too late moisture. Also, bikers attending the Sturgis Rally got their leathers soaked by a storm that would have been more welcome a couple of months ago.

Southeastern markets were very uneven this past week, according to the USDA's Livestock Market News Service. This spotty trading was the result of increased receipts pressuring prices, at the same time that much-needed rains from Tropical Storm Bertha were adding support by improving pasture conditions. The slaughter cattle market continues to struggle with this week's sales quoted 1.00 lower at 62.00 live and 98.00-99.00 on a dressed basis. Spot August CME Live Cattle Futures remain at a premium to cash as contracts settled at 65.22 on Friday, October closed at 68.80. This has caused an onslaught of delivery tenders which should cause the cash and futures prices to come together, one way or another.

Daily National Grain Market Summary

St. Joseph, MO
Report Supplied By USDA

Corn and Soybean bids were higher with wheat bids slightly higher only from support of row crops. The rainfall that moved across the Midwest was spotty dropping 3 inches here, .25 inch there, but basically disappointing thus lending support. Rainfall has now moved into the Eastern Cornbelt which could come into play on Thursday's markets. Concern still lies over yields and speculation over yet lower production estimates in September. Warmer temperatures are now back in the forecast taking away the relief. Wheat steady to 3 cents higher. Corn 5 to 7 cents higher. Soybeans 10 to 14 cents higher. Sorghum 9 to 10 cents higher.

'Maximus' Takes Kutztown's Dairy Beef Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

READING (Berks Co.) — "Maximus" lived up to his dominating name to take home the grand champion honor of Kutztown Fair's dairy beef show Monday evening.

Pam Werley, 18, Hamburg, exhibited the 500-pound animal. This is her third year showing dairy beef, and her second grand champion title in the past two years. This year she also won grand champion showman honors in the dairy beef show.

Werley comes from 150-acre Phil-Don Farm, an operation milking 60 cows.

Although the family operates a dairy farm, Werley ended up buying the calf from an uncle on a nearby farm, since the bull calf had to be born in February and her brother had the farm's lone bull calf born in that time frame. The arraignment worked out, however, for Pam, who took the animal to grand champion placing.

The family brought six cows and two dairy beef to compete at the fair. They also showed at Schuylkill Fair and may enter animals at the Farm Show.

The dairy beef exhibitors will show their animals at the county 4-H Roundup at the end of September. Points accumulated from that show will be part of the overall project champion.

She plans to attend Kutztown University and major in elementary education this fall.

Cheesebox Discounts At APD

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Are you looking for a unique holiday gift? The Penn State Dairy Science Club will be accepting advance orders for their Holiday Cheesebox Sale at Ag Progress Days.

Keystone Enterprise Agway is cooperating with the Dairy Science Club to offer a $2 per box discount on any order placed at the club's booth located in Agway's exhibit on E. 5th Street during Ag Progress Days. Boxes ordered during APD will be delivered in early December or may be picked up in December at the University Creamery.

Cutting-Edge Research Featured At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Wild pumpkins, a vineyard of wine and table grapes, and a "living mulch" system are among the research plots that will be highlighted in guided tours of the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center during Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20.22.

The free 30-minute bus tours, which leave every half-hour from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day and until 6 p.m. on Aug. 21, will take visitors through Penn State's horticulture, plant pathology, agronomy and entomology research farms, as well as the USDA Pasture Systems and Watershed Management Laboratory research farm.

On the horticulture farm, visitors will see wild relatives of cultivated pumpkin and squash. The wild varieties are more likely to have resistance to insect pests and the diseases they transmit. Researchers hope that by breeding the wild and cultivated varieties, strains can be developed that are less susceptible to insect and disease damage.

Showman Shares Advice

PREBLE, N.Y. — After winning two national showmanship competitions for two consecutive years, Jeff VanPatten is qualified to give tips on how to excel in the dairy show ring.

The youth from Preble, N.Y., won the intermediate contest at the All-American Dairy Show in 2000 and went on to be named senior division winner in 2001. He also won reserve championships in 2000 and 2001 at the New York Spring National Show.

According to VanPatten, showmanship participants and their animals need to look the part in order to do well. They should take pride in personal attire and pay close attention to details in the animal's appearance. The person and the animal should glide together as a team, and if the animal misbehaves, the secret is to maintain concentration, stay calm, and maneuver her in the best possible way.

Another important factor is to learn from past mistakes, according to VanPatten. By correcting previous errors, showmanship participants should continue to improve. The most important factor is to never give up, and to seize every opportunity with enthusiasm and confidence.

The Showmanship Contest conducted during the All-American Show in Harrisburg is just one of the many activities offered for youth during the week. The All-American hosts more activities, opportunities, and competitions offered for youth on the national level than anywhere in the country.

The Showmanship Contest, under the direction of Kathy Walton of Carlisle, has rapidly become a popular event, with 229 youth from various states participating in the 2001 show.

VanPatten has been participating in showmanship for more than eight years. Beside his success in Pennsylvania and at the New York Spring Show, he also has enjoyed placing very well at the Mid East Fall National, the Junior All American contest in Louisville, Ky., and the New York State Fair.

VanPatten resides on the family farm, Highlife-Acres Holsteins in Preble, New York. He attends Central High School and will be a junior this fall. The farm consists of 70 acres. VanPatten owns 20 Holsteins and the only Jersey on the farm. He works parttime for Carol Weddle of neighboring Care Bear Holsteins where the milking cows are housed.

VanPatten also raises heifers for resale at the home farm. He buys young stock locally, nationally, and also from Canada. Some of the cattle he has bred and sold have been champions at many shows.

VanPatten, along with his family, attends 10 shows per year but finds the All-American in Harrisburg to be his favorite. He noted that the show is exhibitor-friendly, accessible, with good food and accomodations, and opportunities for friendship.

The Youth Showmanship Contest will be conducted on Sunday, Sept. 22, in the Large Arena at the Farm Show Coomplex in Harrisburg. The contest consists of three age groups: junior, intermediate, and senior. Many volunteers and sponsors are obtained each year in order to make this activity successful. Judges are selected to represent different states. Prizes are given to the top ten participants in each age group and champions receiving special awards.

The All-American Dairy Show week of activities and events will be begin on Sunday, Sept. 22 and conclude on Thursday, Sept. 26. For more information call: (717) 787-2905.

Glenn Shirk To Retire As Longtime Lancaster County Dairy Agent

1,800 dairy farmers. Although it was impossible to work individually with every farmer, Shirk said that he considered it important to make farm visits. It helped him to have a better grasp of the everyday working and the problems farmers faced. What he learned from one farmer could be shared to help other farmers overcome challenges.

During his tenure, Shirk saw tremendous changes. He said, "The dairy industry is very competitive and more technical. Today it is run more like a business than a way a life. The older generation used to work their way through problems, but the younger needs to manage through problems. Today's dairy farmers need to be good managers, up on technology, and know who can provide technical expertise to keep on the cutting edge. They need to adapt to change in a responsible manner."

As he sought to develop educational programs and materials, Shirk said that he focused on areas that dairy farmers had to be concerned about.

"I tried to put myself in their shoes. Their concerns were my concerns," he said.

These included dairy herd management, production and storage of feed crops, farm business management, cow comfort, herd health, dairy facilities, milk quality, milk marketing, governmental policies, regulations, and environmental and conservation concerns.

"Chances were that if farmers were weak in one or several of those areas, they were in trouble and needed assistance, and my goal was to help them," Shirk said.

Of special concern to Shirk was to teach profitability, not for greed but to meet family needs and dreams; economics of herd management; and supportive services for farmers to rely on, such as working with industry people.

Shirk also wrote periodic county newsletters, "Dairy Notes," and authored a weekly column, "Glenn's Udderings." More recently he coordinated a weekly column in Lancaster Farming, "Focus on Dairy."

Shirk said, "The agricultural community and the dairy industry are undergoing a tremendous transition, and part of my challenge has been to help farmers adapt to change, not to resist it but to capitalize on the opportunities that it presents."

He said, "When I began working in the county, we sought to target our help to what we called the 'mainstream dairyman,' who had about a 65-tiestall farm. Today the county is losing that mainstream midsize farmer.

"Instead, the dairy industry is becoming more diverse. On one end of the spectrum are farms with major expansions. On the other end are an increasing number of farms operated by the plain sect, who tend to have smaller farms. It is a challenge to meet all the needs of the diverse dairy clientele."

To help with the diverse needs, a new position was established in July — not to replace Shirk's position but to help smaller dairy farms remain viable. Beth Grove is the dairy agent from the Virginia Cooperative Extension who has joined Lancaster County extension to help the smaller farmers.

Grove is from a Virginia dairy farm and earned a master's degree in dairy reproduction from Virginia Tech, where she helped conduct research on heat synchronization programs for dairy cattle, on phosphorus reduction, and on Johne's disease. Grove was recently recognized as the outstanding young alumnus for Virginia Tech Dairy Science.

Shirk's focus until his retirement is to concentrate on the needs of the larger commercial herds.

Shirk, who has held numerous leadership positions with the Pennsylvania Association of County Agricultural Agents and with the National Association, said, "Extension has been my life, and there hasn't been much room for anything else.

"I'm satisfied with my choices," Shirk said of devoting his entire working career to extension. "I've been blessed with professional freedom and the chance to get deeply involved in helping farmers."

Shirk quoted a verse of scripture, "It is more blessed to give than to receive," and added, "I've been well blessed with so many fine people that greatly enriched my life — farmers, industry people, extension — and my wife Carol, who has been supportive of my work."

Beth Grove

Shirk has been married to Carol Lee Brown since 1974.

Shirk has no firm plans for what he will do after retirement. He said, "I want to stay connected to the dairy industry, but with some time freedoms. I'll miss the people, but I won't miss the paperwork."

Farm Equipment Takes Center Stage At Penn State Ag Progress Days

that challenges the farmer," he said. "These are hands-on demonstrations; farmers can get as close as safely possible. Equipment is demonstrated by company people, and the farmer can ask specific questions while the machine is running in the field.

"Each year we try to customize the field demonstrations to match the exhibitors," he said. "This year our special demonstrations will be with sprayers. We have at least five companies that will bring sprayers to demonstrate their unique options.

"You'll see a variety of sprayers, from three-point hitches up to the 'big boys' with 80-foot booms. We'll have self-contained units, foam markers — the whole works."

Several popular features will return this year, including demonstrations of hay mowing, hay rakes and tedders, baling and bale handling, as well as a skid steer rodeo and farm safety demonstrations. Vegetable producers will find an expanded high tunnels demonstration tour. And, for the second year, several companies will showcase their equipment systems in custom field demonstration space.

"I saw the need to offer exhibitors dedicated areas to demonstrate their equipment in sequence," Oberheim said. "There will be hay handling, bale grinding, forage mixing, haylage bagging, planter demonstrations, and other ag equipment at these sites."

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Other information about Ag Progress Days is included in two special sections this issue.

Promotion Groups Work Together At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Dairy farmers are invited to 2002 Ag Progress Days to learn more about how dairy checkoff programs help to increase overall demand for dairy products.

The Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP), American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East (ADADC Mid East), and the Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association will host a joint exhibit at the annual event, Aug. 20-22, at the Ag Progress Days grounds, Rockspring.

All dairy farmers and anyone affiliated with the dairy industry are invited to visit the joint exhibit in Dairy and Livestock Tent number 1 to learn more about both local and national dairy promotion efforts.

Pennsylvania dairy farmers are also invited to a free luncheon and informational meeting hosted by the Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program at noon, Thursday, Aug. 22 in the Special Events Building at Ag Progress Days. This will serve as the annual meeting for PDPP and a great opportunity for farmers to hear more about new dairy promotion initiatives.

Eight Dairy Breeds In Show Ring At Kutztown

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Youth and open show exhibitors brought all eight official dairy breeds into the ring at the Kutztown Fair Thursday.

At the end of the day, it was a 4-year-old Holstein owned by Mike and Angie Davis that edged out Andrew Youse's Jersey for supreme champion of show.

"She's the most correct-bodied cow of the group," said judge James Shaw of the supreme champion. "She also has the best udder."

Shaw acknowledged that Youse's smaller brown cow was a strong contender for top spot.

"The Jersey is right on her doorstep," he said. "They are a very, very close pair."

Cornell Web Site Offers Information For Small-Scale Farmers

ITHACA, N.Y. — According to the USDA, 92 percent of the 32,000 farms in New York State are considered small farms. Small-scale farmers care for 50 percent of the state's 7.25 million acres of farmland. They account for 40 percent of New York farm product sales.

Small farms support local businesses and communities, maintain our working landscapes, protect watersheds, and produce an array of delicious, farm-fresh products.

But small-scale producers sometimes have a hard time finding information that's really suited to their needs. Cornell's Small Farms Program aims to solve this problem by making available research, educational programs, and information targeted to the needs of New York's small farms.

As part of this effort, the Small Farms Web Site was launched in 2000 and has been growing ever since. The site is geared for small farm operators, as well as educators and service providers for the small farm audience.

The Web site, www.smallfarms.cornell.edu, offers a wealth of information on all aspects of small-scale farming, including production issues, business management, marketing, beginning farmer issues, organic production, and support organizations. An annotated bibliography links you directly to hundreds of online articles, fact sheets, bulletins, and other resources.

Sections of the web site include:

- About Small Farms: small farms statistics, contributions of small farms, and other general information.
- Production: information on production systems including agroforestry, alternative crops, dairy, livestock, field crops fruits and vegetables. Also food safety, pest management, health and safety, organic production, sustainable agriculture, and soil and water quality issues.
- Marketing: information on agritourism opportunities, direct marketing including CSA and farmers markets, internet marketing, wholesale, value-added processing, and market trends.
- And more: Management, New Farmers, Working with Small Farms, Grants, Organizational Links and What's New.

You can visit the Small Farms web site at www.smallfarms.cornell.edu.

Overseeing the Small Farms Web Site is the Small Farms Task Group, which includes farmers, extension educators, Cornell faculty, and representatives of the New York State Department of Agriculture and Markets, New York State Senate and Assembly, and non-governmental organizations.

If you'd like to know more about the Cornell Small Farms Program, or if you are interested in becoming a member of the Small Farms Task Group, contact R. David Smith, (607) 255-7286, rds4@cornell.edu or Joanna Green, (607) 255-9227, jg16@cornell.edu.

Drought Conditions Worsen

emergency declaration are Adams, Bedford, Berks, Chester, Cumberland, Franklin, Fulton, Lancaster, Lebanon, Schuylkill, and York. The portions of the central-Maryland counties in the Susquehanna basin under the state's drought emergency declaration are Baltimore, Carroll, Cecil, and Harford.

Paul Swartz, SRBC executive director, noted that with the flow in the main stem Susquehanna River and many of its tributaries continuing to decline, SRBC has begun contacting certain consumptive water users to prepare to implement compliance actions. SRBC also supports the mandatory restrictions imposed by communities and the states.

"The City of Baltimore, for example, has imposed mandatory restrictions on its customers and has reduced its use of Susquehanna waters," said Swartz. "Like other metropolitan areas currently impacted by this drought, the commission strongly concurs with the city's decision to impose mandatory restrictions, which will help to reduce the water demands during this very stressful period."

In the Susquehanna basin, the lower Susquehanna region is particularly hard hit. SRBC cited some of the primary impacts.

Swartz said, "The current outlook for agricultural crop production is not good and groundwater levels in several lower Susquehanna counties continue to alarm us.

"Given that a high percentage of the Susquehanna basin's homeowners, public water suppliers and industries rely on groundwater sources, we all need to be very mindful of this continuing problem."

Swartz said, "We're in the midst of a very hot and dry summer, and there seems to be no relief in sight for the continued stresses on our water supplies and on our resources and the environment in the lower Susquehanna region."

Swartz cited the types of stresses that droughts can place on the environment, including raising stream temperatures and lowering dissolved oxygen, causing algae growth, exposing streambeds that can result in fish kills or stranding fish and other aquatic species in pools (exposed to predation and improper conditions), and stressing or killing aquatic plant species that provide food and shelter and exposing them to competition from other invasive plants.

There are five primary parameters that SRBC continuously monitors during droughts: precipitation, groundwater levels, streamflows, soil moisture, and reservoir levels. Below are details of select conditions:

Precipitation Shortfalls (for the last 60 days)

The counties located entirely or partially in the Susquehanna basin with the greatest deficits over the past 60 days are (in alphabetical order):

- Berks County, Pa., 4.7-inch deficit
- Cecil County, Md., 4.0-inch deficit
- Chester County, Pa., 4.9-inch deficit
- Cumberland County, Pa., 4.2-inch deficit
- Dauphin County, Pa., 3.8-inch deficit
- Lancaster County, Pa., 5-inch deficit
- Perry County, Pa., 4.2-inch deficit
- Schuylkill County, Pa., 4.6-inch deficit.

Groundwater Levels

The counties located entirely or partially in the Susquehanna basin with groundwater levels at emergency levels on this date (Aug. 12) are (in alphabetical order):

- Baltimore County, Md.
- Berks County, Pa.
- Carroll County, Md.
- Chester County, Pa.
- Columbia County, Pa.
- Cumberland County, Pa.
- Franklin County, Pa.
- Harford County, Md.
- Lancaster County, Pa.
- Lebanon County, Pa.
- Luzerne County, Pa.
- Northumberland County, Pa.
- Schuylkill County, Pa.
- Snyder County, Pa.

Streamflows

On this date (Aug. 12), 16 streams in the Susquehanna basin are at or near all-time record daily low flows for this date or they are near or below established critical lows. They include (from north to south):

- Lackawanna River at Archbald, Lackawanna County, Pa.
- Spring Creek at Milesburg, Centre County, Pa.
- Beech Creek at Monument, Centre County, Pa.
- Dunning Creek near Belden, Bedford County, Pa.
- Raystown Branch Juniata River at Saxton, Juniata County, Pa.
- Bixlers Run near Loysville, Perry County, Pa.
- Sherman Creek at Shermansdale, Perry County, Pa.
- Letort Spring Run near Carlisle, Cumberland County, Pa.
- Conodoguinet Creek near Hogestown, Cumberland County, Pa.
- Yellow Breeches Creek near Camp Hill, Cumberland County, Pa.
- Swatara Creek near Pine Grove, Schuylkill County, Pa.
- Swatara Creek at Harpers Tavern, Lebanon County, Pa.
- Swatara Creek near Hershey, Dauphin County, Pa.
- Conestoga River at Lancaster, Lancaster County, Pa.
- Conestoga River at Conestoga, Lancaster County, Pa.
- Deer Creek at Rocks, Harford County, Md.

Reservoir Levels

- Dehart Reservoir, Harrisburg, Dauphin County, Pa., at 59.6 percent of capacity
- York Water Company, York, York County, Pa., at 64.3 percent of capacity for total storage
- City of Baltimore, Baltimore County, Md., at 52 percent of total storage

Swartz said, "We urge residents and businesses throughout the Susquehanna basin, particularly those in the lower Susquehanna region, to conserve water." There are many meaningful water conservation tips available to the public.

Outdoor water conservation tips for nonessential water uses include:

- Not watering lawns, unless newly seeded (grass often goes dormant — not dead — during dry conditions)
- Limiting vehicle washing activities
- Sweeping sidewalks and driveways rather than washing them
- Planting more drought-tolerant vegetation and using mulch to retain moisture
- Covering pools and spas when not in use to reduce evaporation.

Indoor water conservation tips for nonessential water uses include:

- Repairing leaking toilets
- Replacing older toilets that use more water with newer, low-consumption toilets
- Repairing leaking and dripping faucets
- Taking shorter showers
- Using washing machines and dishwashers only when loads are full
- Not running water continuously while shaving, brushing teeth, or washing dishes by hand
- Installing new shower heads and sink faucets equipped with water saving devices, such as aerators or spray taps
- Refrigerating tap water to avoid running the faucet waiting for cold water.

The following are some water facts:

- Each person, on average, uses about 62 gallons of water per day.
- A leaking toilet can lose up to 200 gallons per day.
- A leaking faucet can lose up to 11 gallons per day.

For more water conservation tips and for SRBC's Drought Coordination Center, look on SRBC's Website at www.srbc.net. The Drought Coordination Center contains links to the current and past Hydrologic Conditions reports, SRBC's Drought Coordination Plan, a GIS map showing current drought statuses in the Susquehanna basin, and related links to current stream flows, groundwater levels and the precipitation levels, and to SRBC's member states' drought management centers Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Protection, New York State Department of Environmental Conservation, and Maryland Department of the Environment.

Lancaster Roundup Selects Champion Steer

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Lancaster County conducted its 4-H fair recently here at the Elizabethtown Fairgrounds. There were approximately 215 exhibitors who exhibited 387 animals, which included dairy beef, sheep, goats, swine, and beef cattle. Grand champion steer went to Tiffany Dean with Lonestar, pictured here with judge Colby Ferguson. More information about the fair, including photos, is scheduled in next week's issue.

Horse-Powered Hay Press Displayed At Penn State's Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Blending nostalgia and technology, a vintage horse-powered hay press will be demonstrated at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22.

About 100 years old, this rare piece from Penn State's Pasto Agricultural Museum will give a live demonstration of farm work as it was done in a slower, simpler time.

"Each day at noon, we will demonstrate a 1905 stationary hay press powered by a mule,' said museum curator Darwin Braund. "It will show how loose hay was pressed into rectangular blocks or bales weighing 100 to 120 pounds.

"One or two horses or mules hitched to a 12-foot pipe sweep arm walk in a circle to drive a 16-foot-long wooden plunger, which compresses the hay in a metal chamber," Braund said. "As the compressed hay emerges, long wires are placed around the bale by hand to hold it together."

Braund said the baler was donated to the museum in 1998 by Robert L. Cowan, professor emeritus of animal nutrition, and was restored in early 1999. Cowan, 82 years old, will operate the machine with the aid of his sons.

Ag Progress Days hours are 9 a.m to 5 p.m. on Aug. 20; 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Aug. 21; and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Aug. 22. Admission and parking are free.

York 4-H Lamb, Swine Exhibitors 'Round Up' Sale Cash

DAVE LEFEVER

YORK (York Co.) — Rick Jones has been exhibiting livestock for eight years, but this week marked a high point in his 4-H career as a showman.

The Dover High School 10th-grader exhibited the grand champion market lamb at the York County 4-H Roundup here Monday. The 127-pound crossbred Suffolk went on to bring $525, cash that Jones said will go toward his college education. He plans to major in ag nutrition.

Jones raises market lambs as well as show swine on the six-acre farm of his parents, Rich and Carol Jones. Morrell Myers, Thomasville, and Waggoner Construction, East Berlin, teamed up to buy the prize lamb.

Kurt Long, Airville, exhibited the grand champion market hog, a 254-pound York/Hampshire crossbred.

Long, 13, is no stranger to showing top animals. He has twice exhibited grand champion hog at the York Fair during his six year show career so far. He raises a variety of livestock, including cattle, lambs, and swine, on the farm of his parents, Sam and Vickie Long. Kurt will be an 8th-grader this fall at Red Lion Junior High School.

Delbert Hake of Delbert Hake Excavating, Etters, bought Long's hog for $250.

Long said he will use the money to "probably either buy more pigs or put it in my bank account."

Lamb and swine results, called by judges Matt Trostle and Colby Ferguson, respectively, are as follows:

ProAg: Milk Prices To Take Another Hit

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.) — According to Arden Tewksbury, manager of the Progressive Agriculture Organization (ProAg), prices paid to area dairy farmers on Aug. 18 will decline even more than last month's price.

Tewksbury said he expects the statistical (old blend) price in Order #1 to drop to about $12 per CWT. June's price was $12.38 per CWT. To make things worse, the advance price paid to dairy farmers on Aug. 25 for the first 15 days of August deliveries will be down to $9.33 per CWT. This will be a 76-cent decline from last month's deplorable prices. These prices are at least $4 per CWT (40 cents per gal.) less than prices needed by the average dairy farmer.

Tewksbury said many people blame the low prices on over production in the USA, but in his opinion, the dairy products being imported into the U.S. are the real problem. Some people estimate the imported dairy products could equal 9 million pounds of milk. These imported products are enough to clog up domestic markets and force lower, unrealistic prices to our dairy farmers.

ProAg believes the attorney generals in Pennsylvania and New York should immediately look into the possible illegal use of milk protein concentrate in the milk processing plants in both states.

ProAg can be reached at (570) 833-5776.

Administration Says West Nile Health Risk Low

NEW CUMBERLAND (Cumberland Co.) — State Physician General Dr. Rob Muscalus, Department of Health Secretary Robert S. Zimmerman Jr., Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess, and Department of Agriculture Secretary Samuel Hayes recently reaffirmed that Pennsylvania's battle against West Nile Virus continues on all fronts, including enhanced monitoring, prevention and quick response to suspected and confirmed cases of the disease in animals.

In doing so, the Schweiker Administration reassured residents that health risks associated with West Nile Virus are low for most people, and urged all residents to become actively involved with front-line prevention efforts.

"There have been positive bird and mosquito cases of West Nile Virus in Pennsylvania, so it is important for people to take reasonable measures to prevent mosquito bites and to eliminate places where mosquitoes can breed," Dr. Muscalus said.

"But I also want to stress that the risk of being bitten by a mosquito infected with the virus is small, and even if bitten by an infected mosquito, the risk of becoming severely ill is smaller yet."

Health officials say only about one in 150 people infected with West Nile Virus will have serious health problems. West Nile Virus can be spread to people by an infected mosquito. Mosquitoes acquire the virus from infected birds.

Those mosquitoes can then transmit the virus to people and other animals.

"In Pennsylvania, there have been no reported cases of West Nile Virus in humans this year, however state agencies continue to be aggressive with activities to combat West Nile in the Commonwealth," Zimmerman said. "Unfortunately, the virus is here to stay. We need to treat it seriously, but also keep in proper perspective the minimal health risks it poses."

Zimmerman reminded residents that they can help track the disease by reporting dead birds, especially crows, hawks and blue jays, by calling the state Health Department at 1-877-PA-HEALTH.

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — In his last season of showing animals for 4-H, John Strawbridge took home several grand champion honors at the Kutztown Fair's breeding swine show Tuesday, and topped it off with a supreme gilt honor.

Strawbridge won grand champion Duroc, Poland China, and Spotted Swine gilt placings before winning the show with his Duroc gilt.

The animal that showed judge Matt Trostle "muscle combined with structure and soundness" took home grand champion of Kutztown Fair's market hogs class Tuesday.

Samantha Rabenold's hog came out of a deep heavyweight class to win first the heavyweight champion and then grand champion positions.

The homebred hog, "Shirley," named in honor of an aunt, weighed in a 237 pounds. The animal also took home the grand champion market hogs placing last week at Reading Fair.

Samantha, 11, from Rabenold Farms, is the daughter of Carl and Brenda Rabenold. She has been in 4-H for five years.

Judge Matt Trostle, York, said that three aspects of a hog factor into his decision when he selects a grand champion animal. The hog must be lean yet show enough muscle to please the packer and the consumer, must be practical and exhibit good structure and the ability to move, and must look like a show hog, be attractive, and balance up nicely, said Trostle.

In the champion drive, "all three show a lot of pluses, and the minuses are minimal," he said.

The reserve champion market hog, "sound, balanced, and suits me," according to Trostle, was shown by Matt Manbeck.

Samantha Rabenold, 11, took home grand champion honors with a hog that won at Reading Fair recently. Matt Trostle, York, judged the show.

Manbeck, who dubbed his 230-pound animal "Jean the Gilt," will stop fair competition to enter the collegiate world as he attends Virginia Tech this fall and study animal science. He recently graduated from Conrad Weiser High School.

Judge Trostle plans to judge seven show this year of a variety of livestock. At home on the family farm, Trostle's Livestock, is 125 brood ewes and a dozen Hampshire and crossbred sows.

Results follow:

BOVINE LEUKOSIS: ARE YOU IGNORING THIS DISEASE?
Dr. Arlen Mills
Capitol Region Extension Veterinarian
Lebanon

Bovine leukosis and lymphosarcoma are two names used to describe a disease in cattle caused by the bovine leukosis virus. Infection by the virus can result in a cancerous disease of the lymph nodes and white blood cells.

More than 60 percent of dairy herds have cows that test positive for leukosis. In some of these herds, up to 90 percent of cows in the herd test positive for BLV. A positive blood test commonly used to diagnose the disease indicates that the cow has been exposed to the virus and has developed antibodies against the leukosis virus.

Interestingly, in most herds, less than 1 percent of those cows which have a positive blood test for BLV (bovine leukosis virus) will ever develop the cancerous disease. There are exceptions to this as I have seen herds with greater than 30 percent incidence in the mature cows.

There is usually no good explanation for this increase in incidence. Is it an especially nasty virus that has gotten into that herd? Or is there some type of immune suppression occurring that has made the herd more susceptible to the virus? I don't know of any good answer to those questions.

Infection with the virus mainly occurs through the transfer of blood — specifically white blood cells — from a carrier animal. Significant numbers of infected lymphocytes can be present in blood, colostrum, and milk. A small percentage of calves are infected before birth if the cow is infected. The major proportion of calves are infected after birth through colostrum or milk from an infected cow or through the transfer of blood by any number of procedures. Infection is lifelong.

The most important steps to prevent infection are to:

- Feed only colostrum from test-negative cows.
- Feed milk replacer to calves. The virus is easily killed during pasteurization, so any milk fed should either be from test-negative cows or be pasteurized.
- Remove horns by burning or paste.
- Use no common needles or instruments such as taggers or tattoo pliers without disinfecting between animals.

Additional control steps may include changing sleeves during rectal palpation and good insect control, because biting insects can potentially carry the infection from one animal to another. Research has shown that there is a strong genetic influence on the susceptibility of cattle to infection.

Infected animals do not usually show signs of the disease until four years of age or older, although signs have been seen in two-year-olds. Some infections are very obvious, causing enlarged lymph glands that may be seen as lumps under the skin. Glands behind the eyes may enlarge, causing the eyes to bulge.

But the tumors may also invade internal organs, making detection more difficult. Tumors are common in the area of the heart, the abomasum, the uterus, and in glands around the spinal cord. I have seen tumors in the throat area of cows that made it impossible for them to swallow.

The incidence of this disease seems to be increasing in the dairy cattle of North America. Packers of market dairy cows are reporting that leukosis is the leading cause for carcass loss during processing. It costs the packers thousands of dollars annually. Some of this loss has to be transferred back to dairy producers via lower prices paid for these market cows. The cost of premature culling because of BLV is impossible to calculate.

Bovine leukosis is an easy disease to ignore, but also an easy disease to control. Institute the basic control measures listed above to get control of this growing problem.

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — A long-bodied, purebred Duroc gilt was all John Strawbridge needed to cap a long, successful career as a 4-H fair exhibitor this week, as John brought home Kutztown champion gilt.

John, 18, is the son of Donna Strawbridge, White Hall. This was his last time as 4-H exhibitor at the fair.

The purebred Duroc, homebred, won the February gilt class.

John still plans to show at Allentown, Keystone International Livestock Expo, and has shown at Louisville. He plans to show at Farm Show in January.

He plans to enroll at Lehigh-Carbon Community College.

Health Screening Offered At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Farm families join AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians, NEC (Northeast Center for Agricultural Health) and ProCare, Inc. staff for health screenings at Ag Progress Days here at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Center.

The health screening is one of many exciting activities at the Ag Safety and Health tent located at the end of West 6th Street beside the Farm Safety Demonstration area.

The Northeast Center for Agricultural Health staff will be conducting hearing screenings from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 20. The free screening will include education on hearing loss prevention and protection.

Research shows that seven out of 10 farmers tested in a New York State study had evidence of hearing loss. This is largely related to loud noise produced by the various types of farm equipment. NEC staff recommends that you protect and save your hearing by reducing the noise exposure around you, wearing hearing protection, and having your hearing tested. Free earplugs will be provided to farm families receiving hearing testings.

ProCare, Inc. staff will be at Ag Progress Days on Tuesday, Aug. 20 - Thursday, Aug. 22 to conduct a variety of muscular skeletal screenings. This is an opportunity for farm families to test their grip strength, balance, and gait. Since it is very common for farmers to have difficulties because of back pain or injury, ProCare, Inc. staff will provide a posture analysis and discuss proper lifting techniques.

AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians works with farmers who continue in agricultural production despite an injury or ongoing health condition. This statewide program is a collaborative effort between Penn State Cooperative Extension and Easter Seals Central Pennsylvania.

For more information about AgrAbility or the activities at the Ag Safety and Health tent at Ag Progress Days, contact AgrAbility staff at (814) 863-7490.

Drought Website Provides Management Information

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Ohio producers and growers who have concerns regarding potential drought conditions that may affect crop and livestock performance can refer to an Ohio State University drought Website for management information.

The Website, created by Ohio State University Extension specialists, offers a wide variety of topics from drought news to weed control, to provide producers, growers, Ohio State Extension agents, agribusinesses, and crop consultants timely and pertinent information on how to manage livestock and crop production during dry conditions.

"The site is a clearinghouse for drought information," said Peter Thomison, an Ohio State extension agronomist, "where producers, crop consultants and the like can find what they may be looking for all in one place."

The Website contains fact sheets, bulletins, and news releases on current drought news, livestock, corn, soybeans, forages, weed control, fruit production, and marketing information. It also contains a National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) Drought Severity Index map and resource guide to other drought-related Websites.

The site, which is updated on a regular basis, can be accessed by logging onto http://corn.osu.edu/drought02/. The last time Ohio State posted a drought Website was in 1999, when Ohio was faced with similar dry conditions.

Zimmermans Host Holstein Field Day

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — A few hundred Holstein enthusiasts took a break from farm work to see some of the top type cows in the state Thursday at the Lancaster County Holstein Field Day.

The 55-cow herd at Cocalico Holsteins, owned and managed by Paul B. Zimmerman and his son Paul Jr., is distinguished by being the top herd for type in Pennsylvania, with 31 Excellent cows and a breed age average (BAA) of 112.9.

Paul B. Zimmerman Sr. moved onto the farm 67 years ago — at the age of 6. His father Martin Zimmerman had a dairy operation with unregistered cows here. When Paul took over management in 1952, he began to build a herd of registered Holsteins by buying local high-quality cows.

"I didn't go out and pay really big money, but looked for sound, young cows," Zimmerman said. Within two or three years, the herd was completely registered.

This foundation herd consisted of mostly Canadian-bred Holsteins. The Zimmermans have continued to emphasize Canadian genetics in building the herd through the years, while also adding "a few other (non-Canadian) bulls."

The Zimmerman's herd average is 22,000 pounds of milk, with 4.0 percent butterfat and 3.1 percent protein — without using bST or total mixed rations.

"We do it the hard way," Zimmerman said. The feeding program consists of corn silage, alfalfa haylage and dry hay, high moisture corn, and concentrates.

Longevity is one of the traits found in Cocalico Holsteins. Included in the herd are Cocalico Astro-Jet Lilac, an EX-94 cow who will be 13 years old in November. Another cow will soon turn 14.

While some of these "old preserved cows" might present more of a challenge breeding back, "I can't see getting rid of them," Zimmerman said.

Paul Zimmerman Jr. recently began flushing some of the top cows for embryos, including Cocalico Supreme Barbie, another aged cow classified EX-94.

Guests at the field day had the opportunity to judge three classes of Cocalico Holsteins, between visiting with fellow dairy families and a number of agribusiness representatives in attendance. Lunch, refreshments, and a lawn-tractor-powered "train ride" for children were other highlights of the day.

People outnumbered cows Thursday at the Lancaster County Holstein Day on the Paul B. Zimmerman farm. In 50 years of dairying, Zimmerman, along with his son Paul Jr. in recent years, has built the top herd for type in Pennsylvania, featuring 31 cows classified Excellent and a breed age average (BAA) of 112.9.

Rabies Oral Vaccine Project Under Way In Western Pa.

WEST MIFFLIN (Allegheny Co.) — Officials kick off the aerial campaign to distribute oral rabies vaccine in western Pennsylvania.

"This health initiative helps to protect people, pets, agriculture, and our wildlife," Hayes said. "Animal and human health-care providers are concerned for the very serious health risk and financial burden that this disease poses for our citizens and domestic animals. This vaccination project is positive in every aspect."

Hayes said the wild raccoon population is the species with the highest incidence of rabies, and the raccoon is the species that poses the greatest threat of spreading the disease to humans and domestic and wild animals.

The state Department of Agriculture and its partners are in the process of implementing this year's oral rabies vaccine baiting program. Bait containing the rabies vaccine is being distributed in a 38-mile wide band along Pennsylvania's western border from West Virginia to New York, proceeding in a southerly direction. The hand-baiting program began on Aug. 5 and will end along with the aeriel-baiting campaign on Aug. 31. Baits are being distributed by air and on land.

21 Head Compete At Kutztown's Beef Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

KUTZTOWN (Berks Co.) — Nathan Dietrich, 11, and 1,170-pound "Austin" rose to the top of a 21-head market beef show at Kutztown Fair's beef show Monday.

Nathan is from Dietrich Family Farms, a 600-acre operation which hosts steers, pigs, and lambs in Krumsville.

Older siblings Dean and Erin Dietrich also show livestock. The Dietrichs exhibited animals at Reading Fair and plan to move on to show at Oley, besides showing at Kutztown, before they end their show season.

Austin, which Nathan picked out himself to purchase in early November, rose to the top of the middleweight classes before taking the grand champion position.

Taking home reserve champion honors in the market beef show was Emilie Miller, Womelsdorf.

The steer is part of a string of cattle, ECM Herefords, which includes 50 animals.

A senior this year at Tulpehocken High School, she is looking for a college in the western U.S. and hopes to major in agriculture education.

She is the president of the state Junior Hereford Association and a candidate for the national junior board of directors.

In her 10th year as a 4-H'er, Emilie took home reserve champion fitter honors at Kutztown's beef show.

In the breeding beef show, "this is a really nice group of females. They are all something everybody can be proud of," said judge Lee Wagner. He narrowed down the competition to put an Angus heifer owned by Clay Brubaker on top as supreme champion. Wagner described the heifer as straight, correct, and feminine, putting together a long top and depth of rib.

Clay, 11, Womelsdorf, purchased 127 Mistic Hill Jolt last fall, and plans to put the animal-into his own herd, which numbers 15 head.

This year marks Clay's third and final year showing at Kutztown Fair, as the Brubaker family plans to move to Virginia this fall.

He is the son of Ken and Ginger Brubaker, Womelsdorf, operators of Brubaker Angus at Forge Hollow Farm, a 63 acre, 40 cow/calf operation.

Lee Wagner, Easton, judged the show. Although he usually judges in the sheep ring, Wagner, a former Angus breeder, judges four to five shows a year and has judged at the Kutztown Fair many times. He is the flock manager for Sunrise Farms, which totals 100 sheep, including his own polled Dorset sheep.

Plant MARA Perennial Ryegrass for grazing or balage.

Mara is a very winter hardy diploid ryegrass from Romania where summers are hot and quite dry and winters very cold.

Mara is proving itself better adapted to the Mid-Atlantic region than most perennial ryegrasses.

Mara offers: rapid establishment, excellent feed value, late maturity (May 20-25 to boot stage in Lanc. Co.) good heat tolerance, high yields, great stand density, good palatability.

For pasture we recommend seeding Alice White and Cyclone Red Clover along with the ryegrass.

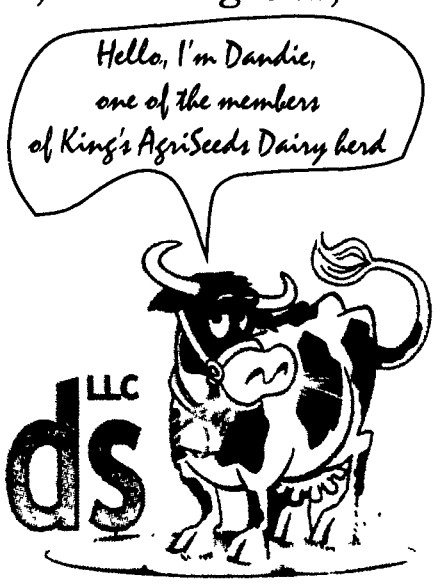
MARA IS NOW THE MAJOR COMPONENT OF OUR POPULAR KING'S GRAZING MIX AND BG 34 RYEGRASS BLEND. BARENBRUG Forages For Profit

MARA #1 in University of Kentucky horse grazing trial for yield and percent ground cover. Mara was also #1 in a Michigan cattle grazing trial during a dry year. These trials included fescues, bluegrass, orchardgrass, festuloliums and other ryegrasses.



Make Great For Balage or Haylage

Use Green Spirit or InstaGold Annual Ryegrass as a cover/forage crop after corn silage. Green Spirit and InstaGold have higher quality than rye, triticale or wheat if cut before boot stage. Ryegrass is actually a better feed than alfalfa with more digestible fiber and sugars.

Cooking Relieves Stress, Anxiety, Says Laverty

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — "Cooking is my hobby. I do it for fun to relieve stress and anxiety," said Lee Laverty, Mount Joy.

Some readers may recognize Lee's name as a reliable recipe contributor, answering cooking requests that appear in this paper.

A former New Jersey resident, Lee and her husband, Ray, recently moved to the Mount Joy area, where she is experimenting with a whole new way of cooking.

At first the local Pennsylvania Dutch entrees seemed a bit unseasoned or plain, but she has come to enjoy it.

Tomatoes add color and flavor to cooked and uncooked dishes.

Using Tomatoes

KETCHUP

1 basket tomatoes

Cook put through sieve or colander.

Combine the following ingredients with the tomato puree:

1 quart vinegar
7 cups pulp
6 cups sugar
5-6 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon dry mustard
1 teaspoon celery salt
1 teaspoon onion salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon cloves

Simmer mixture until it thickens to the desired amount of consistency for ketchup. Pour into pint jars and process according to canner instructions.

CHEESEBURGER PIE

1 pound ground beef
1½ tablespoons onion
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
1½ cups milk
¾ cup biscuit baking mix
3 eggs
2 tomatoes, sliced
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese

Heat oven to 400 degrees. Grease pie plate. Brown beef and onion, drain. Stir in salt and pepper. Spread in plate. Beat milk, baking mix, and eggs until smooth, 15 seconds in blender or high or one minute with had mixer. Pour into plate. Top with tomatoes, sprinkle with cheese.

Bake 5-8 minutes. Cool 5 minutes before serving. Serves 6-8.

Nonetheless, Lee often resorts to her Polish roots to make family recipes that she watched her mom making without written recipes. Her parents operated a Polish restaurant, where they served traditional Polish foods.

"Cooking is in my blood. I can't identify with those who complain about needing make a meal," Lee said.

"The hardest part about cooking after I was married was to learn how to cook for two instead of a crowd," Lee said.

One of her first ventures was preparing sauerbraten. "I followed the recipe exactly, but it tasted so bad, we couldn't eat it. My husband dumped it in the incinerator of the compartment complex where we lived. The next day the incinerator was turned off. My husband always claimed the sauerbraten was so bad that even the incinerator couldn't handle it."

Soon after that, Lee and a friend baled butter cookies. They enjoyed it so much, they kept making more and more batches until they had thousands of cookies.

"That year every one we knew got butter cookies for Christmas," Lee said.

Since then, Lee has become a seasoned cook in many different areas.

"I like to experiment and make up my own recipes," Lee said. "I enjoy watching shows on the cooking channel and reading recipes."

Then she thinks of ways to adapt the recipes to use seasonings and ingredients she and her family prefer until it tastes "fine."

Garlic is a staple in her recipes. She believes that canned minced garlic provides a tasty and quick alternative to preparing fresh garlic. Kosher salt and freshly cracked pepper provides better tasting seasoning, she said. She also recommends using olive oil in all recipes requesting oil except for cakes. Fresh basil is another ingredient she keeps on hand.

"I love using wooden spoons for stirring while cooking," Lee said. "And it saves the Teflon on the kettles."

Holidays include family gatherings at the Laverty home. As much as she enjoys cooking, Lee doesn't want it to consume so much time that she can't visit with her guests. She said, "I make whatever I can ahead of time, and I select easy recipes so that I can spend time with our company."

Lee especially enjoys preparing tomato-based dishes and pastas. Here are some recipes she sent in answer to this week's request for "tomato" recipe topics.

BRUSCHETTA WITH TOMATO AND BASIL

½ baguette or crusty loaf bread, sliced (12 pieces)
2 large cloves garlic, cracked away from skin
Extra-virgin olive oil, for drizzling

Preheat broiler to high (if you prefer, grill the bread). Place bread slices on a broiler pan. Char bread on each side under hot broiler, keep an eye on it. Rub toasts with cracked garlic and drizzle with oil.

6 plum tomatoes, halved, seeded
1 small red onion, minced
2 tablespoons fresh basil leaves, chopped fine
1 red pepper, chopped fine
2-3 tablespoons fresh basil leaves, chopped fine
1 red pepper, chopped fine
2-3 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
Coarse salt
Cracked pepper to taste

Chop seeded tomatoes and place in a small bowl. Add onions, pepper, and garlic. Pile basil leaves on top of one another and roll into a log. Thinly slice basil into green confetti and loosely combine with tomato mixture. Add olive oil, balsamic vinegar, salt, and pepper to the bowl and gently toss tomato mixture to coat. Add:

½ pound fresh mozzarella cheese, thinly sliced

SHRIMP SCAMPI WITH SUN DRIED TOMATOES

1 pound medium cooked, shelled shrimp

Thaw shrimp if frozen. Set on paper towel to dry off. Set aside.

In large saute pan, melt:
½ cup butter

Add:
¼ cup minced onion

Saute until transparent.

Add:
2 teaspoons minced garlic (more if preferred)
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup white wine

Bring to boil and simmer for one minute. Layer shrimp on top and add 1 cup chopped sun-dried tomatoes. Toss until heated through. Serve with white rice. Makes 2 good-size servings.

Lee Laverty developed this recipe that combines in-season produce for a colorful one-dish meal. Tomato Zucchini Delite may be served as a side dish if the meat is omitted.

Featured Recipe

Lee Laverty loves preparing tomato-based dishes and pastas. Here is one that she developed. Tomato Zucchini Delite is a colorful one-dish meal, or if you prefer, omit the meat and use it as a side dish.

TOMATO ZUCCHINI DELITE

1 cup sliced onions
2 tablespoons olive oil
8-inch zucchini
8-inch yellow squash
1 red pepper, diced
1 can diced tomatoes
8-ounces tomato sauce
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup white wine
1 tablespoons minced garlic
2 cups cooked al dente elbow macaroni
6 leaves fresh basil, coarsely chopped
1 pound Italian sausage, sliced, cooked (optional)
Italian cheese, grated

Cut zucchini and squash in quarters and slice into ½-inch pieces. Set aside. In large skillet, saute onions in olive oil and sprinkle with salt. When onions are just tender, add squash, zucchini, undrained diced tomatoes, tomato sauce, wine, sausage, garlic, salt and pepper. Simmer uncovered 20 minutes or until squashes are fork tender. Add cooked macaroni and simmer for five minutes. Sprinkle with grated cheese and serve.

Quick Buying Tips For Fresh Pennsylvania Tomatoes

— Tomatoes must ripen to a deep, rich red color to achieve their best flavor.

— Ripen pink tomatoes at 60 degrees - 70 degrees Fahrenheit in an open area with good air circulation.

On Being a Farm Wife

Joyce Bupp

It's time again.

This week marks that annual farm extravaganza staged by Penn State and the state's agriculture industry known across the Middle Atlantic region as Ag Progress Days.

Ag Progress Days is hosted on university farms at Rock Springs, located in a beautiful mountain valley just a few miles from the sprawling Penn State main campus at State College. From a modest beginning, it has grown to probably cover a couple of square miles of crop land, pasture, horticultural plantings and timber areas used for research by the University and private ag industry, often in tandem effort, to improve methods, machinery and ag knowledge in general.

Ag Progress Days is a destination event for us every other year or so. The valley where it's staged, and its residents, became especially dear to us during the years our son was a Penn State student, living in an isolated farm house almost within shouting distance of the research farms.

At Ag Progress Days, you can watch demonstrations of the latest in tillage techniques and equipment, innovative haying machines, and compare planting and harvesting methods. You can walk through modern milking layouts, compare plots of various crops, ride on wagons through field tours, sample farm food commodities, and visit with representatives of ag industry, education, and organizations. You can learn a whole bunch about lots of farm stuff, even if you aren't a farmer, though the event is specifically geared to the ag community rather than the general public.

Having visited Ag Progress Days numerous times with The Farmer, our own kids, and in more recent years, the grandkids, I've personally come to think of it as "Toys for Boys."

That's boys of all sizes. And ages.

Because to most farmers — who in their spare time are generally more apt to be out comparing and eyeballing farming techniques as they are playing golf or fishing — events such as Ag Progress are a chance to eyeball and dream about the newest, the biggest, the latest and most innovative in agriculture equipment.

Sort of a giant hands-on, wish book and showcase of new farm machinery.

A few years ago, we visited Ag Progress Days with our extended family, including two grandsons then about ages five and three. It took this grandma barely two hours of running (literally) through displays of tractors, choppers and combines, trying to keep up with little boys racing to be the first to climb up onto the next tractor down the line, before wishing she had a couple of bungee cords to fasten on them to snap them back when they zipped too far down a line of equipment.

In fact, one child was all that one adult could keep up with in dashing off to the next red or green or blue or orange piece of equipment. Some innovative parents of families of small children wisely bring along large toy wagons and pull their children around in those. Ours were so busy running off to climb up on the next piece of equipment that a wagon would simply have slowed down the adults, puffing to catch their breath as we darted off toward the next enticing, shiny new thing with a seat.

Occasionally, some particular item is so interesting and enticing to little guys — the bigger the piece, the more it grabs them like a magnet — that you may almost draw tears when you insist that it is time to move on to see what's farther down the display line or around the next corner. (Sometimes the "big boys" are almost as bad.)

Meanwhile, one must be accumulating an assortment of ag equipment brochures and "tractor books" to study on the ride home and strew around the house for the next several weeks. Generally, at least one exhibitor will accommodate this quest for information by handing out plastic bags, emblazoned with company name, just the size for stashing a mini-library of the latest in ag techniques.

Along with the "Toys for Boys" equipment displays and demos are numerous informative displays and presentations related to family, household, gardens, ag history, all entertaining and enlightening.

Our attendance this year is still undecided. Just in case, I'm keeping an eye open for a long leash.

Checkoff Boosts Flavored Milk Sales

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Dairy checkoff promotes flavored milk this summer with the "Full Chill Flavor" promotion."Full Chill Flavor" involves retailers by providing incentives for them to feature flavored milk in weekly ads, in-store circulars and other print and electronic advertising. In addition, supermarkets and convenience stores also display "Full Chill Flavor" point-of-sale materials to drive store traffic to the dairy case, which will help increase the overall demand for dairy products.

New York's Dairy Royalty Trains For Promotion

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Thirty-three county dairy princesses from across New York came together for the annual New York Dairy Princess Training Seminar at White Eagle Conference Center, Hamilton, N.Y.

While at the training seminar, the girls were taught the basic techniques they will need, while promoting the dairy industry throughout their reigns. They were trained on such topics as media relations and public speaking, school programs, product knowledge, and were even entertained by the state dairy princesses on the appropriate attire of a dairy princess with a fashion show.

Throughout their reigns, the girls are expected to fulfill certain requirements including school programs, farm meetings, and newspaper articles, which will be put toward and end of the year incentive. The girls must also fulfill a base in order to participate in the much anticipated state pageant in February.

Find Healthy Food, Clean Hands In Ag Progress' Family Room

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — From building character to building a bank account, from reading skills to sanitary skills, parents and children who visit the Family Learning Hub at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22, will find a wealth of fun and information.

Located on Main Street between West 8th and 9th Streets at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, the area includes the Family Room building, the ImAGination Station, the Family Animal Learning Center and Shaver's Creek Environmental Center.

The theme in the Family Room is "Healthy Foods, Healthy Families," according to Marilyn Furry, Penn State associate professor of agricultural and extension education.

"We present the latest research and high-priority extension programs," she says, "but they're in contexts that are fun and engaging for children. We're addressing important issues for Pennsylvania today. But they're wrapped up in fun activities like a treasure hunt, guessing the totals in a piggy bank and 'fishing' for saving tips."

"Connecting the Generations" will present several ways that young people and older adults can come together."Pennsylvania Saves — Financial Security for Life" will offer tips for establishing saving and banking habits in young children, including guessing the total amount of money in a piggy bank, and a "fishing for saving tips" contest for kids.

Nearby, Penn State's Shaver's Creek Environmental Center, will stage regular demonstrations featuring raptors, snakes and turtles. Goats, sheep and other domesticated animals will be on display at the Farm Animal Learning Center, hosted by Pennsylvanians for Responsible Use of Animals. And hands-on activities abound at the ImAGination Station: take a drop of water for a walk, guess where chocolate comes from, view a pictorial history of Pennsylvania 4-H, learn what you know about Pennsylvania agriculture and win a prize by completing a series of activities. The adventurous can navigate the corn maze, next to the Crops and Soils tent in E. 5th St.

Self-care Kids: Who Watches The Kids After School?

The school year is just around the corner. A child — alone after school — is just one issue many parents must face.

During the past 15 years, we have seen more and more children arriving home from school to an empty house. It is a normal occurrence for many children between the ages of eight and 15. The children may have two working parents or a single parent. Most of the time, the child is alone for one to three hours. The children are often called "latch-key kids" or children in self-care.

Is self-care good or bad for the child?

Experts disagree. Some experts say it increases the child's fears of physical harm and lack of social contact with friends. Others say it increases a child's independence and sense of responsibility.

Whether self-care is good or bad, it is a reality. Many parents are fraught with anxiety and guilt about having children in self-care. Let's take a few minutes to look at anxieties surrounding self-care kids.

First, knowledge that you are a good parent(s) and have a good home in which you are raising your child. You may be parenting your child differently than your parents did, but you are doing a good job! You have a challenge your parents may not have experienced. And you are facing the challenge.

Second, recognize that children in self-care need a plan — a good plan of attack. Knowing you have a working plan will help to convey a sense of security for both parent and child. A working plan is always under construction. If something works, keep it in the plan. If it doesn't work, throw it out.

Third, a parent can reduce guilt feelings by taking a realistic look at the causes for your feelings. Look at the causes. Write them down. Ask yourself, when my child is home alone:

- I worry about . . .
- I would feel better if . . .
- I am afraid that . . .

Explore your answers and pinpoint a theme. Most anxiety arises from a child's readiness to be alone after school. A child cannot provide the same care that a responsible adult can provide. The issue is whether or not the child will be able to meet minimal standards of safety, social, educational, and emotional needs. Several factors can help a parent decide if the child is ready for self-care.

- The level of the child's skill and abilities: A child who willingly follows through with daily responsibilities — chores, home rules, and homework — exhibits signs of maturity. Being responsible means the tasks are completed according to agreed upon expectations and time limits. When a child recognizes that he/she needs additional help to complete a task is a sign of responsibility.

- The quality of the parent-child relationship: Good communication is essential for a successful self-care plan. Even the best child doesn't like to report problems or challenges. A child who may need help has a hard time distinguishing between a challenging and a potentially dangerous situation. Are you and your child comfortable with identifying realistic potential dangers? Can you establish a plan to handle problems in the self-care plan? If your child doesn't regularly discuss problems with you, he/she may not be ready.

- The child's ability to use good judgment: Self-care requires a child to be capable of resolving problems in a positive manner. A child needs to be able to recognize alternatives when dealing with problems. Coping with frustration is a good thing. So is asking for help.

- The demands of self-care: Just as every family is unique, every self-care plan is unique. "One size does not fit all families." Also before entering into self-care, have a discussion with your child about how he/she feels about being alone. More than one talk may be needed. A child needs plenty of chances to bring up worries, ideas, and issues. Addressing the child's concerns should be part of the self-care plan. Also a child needs to know that if self-care does not work, he/she is not a failure.

Before leaving a child in self-care, you might want to try mini self-care sessions. Leave your child alone for increasingly longer intervals, always with directions to be followed in your absence. The mini-sessions give you and your child a chance to test the waters. After several sessions, sit down with the child and talk over the experience. How did both of you feel about leaving the child alone? Be honest. Express your anxieties. Praise the successes.

Continue talking with your child about his/her feelings. Continue evaluating your child's actions during the time he/she is alone. Most parents decide that a child will be all right in self-care even though there are signs of potential problems. In some cases, the same problems will exist if the parent is present.

The decision to place a child in self-care is a big one. It can be part of the school experience.

The goal is to make children feel safe, emotionally secure and have all the opportunities kids should have.

In-Season Tomatoes Add 'Simply Delicious' Flavor, Color, Nutrition

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Perhaps no other vegetable, with the possible exception of sweet corn, highlights the summer dinner table like farm-fresh Pennsylvania tomatoes. Despite the industry's best efforts, nothing can compare to a tomato that is truly ripened on the vine.

A field ripened tomato offers the real essence of "Simply Delicious." Be sure to check out your local roadside farm market, community farmers' market or even your local supermarket for fresh Pennsylvania tomatoes — because they are ready now.

Tomatoes are a member of the nightshade family — along with potatoes, peppers and eggplant as well as the poisonous nightshade. Probably for that reason, Europeans considered the tomato fruit poisonous when Spanish explorers brought the plants back to Europe from their native South America.

The tomato was grown in Europe as an ornamental house plant. According to the Wellness Encyclopedia of Food and Nutrition (University of California at Berkeley, 1992), it wasn't until the 19th century that the tomato began gaining acceptance as a food.

Initially, both Europeans and Americans were careful to cook tomatoes for hours to neutralize the "poisons." Finally in the last half of the 19th century, people realized the tomato was safe (and delicious) to eat raw or lightly cooked.

Tomatoes have become almost a staple in the American diet because they combine easily with so many different other foods like pasta, rice, meat, poultry, and fish as well as other vegetables. According to the Wellness Encyclopedia, tomatoes are the third most popular vegetable in America. If you include processed tomato products like tomato sauce and juice, they are second only to potatoes.

The reason local growers can offer superior quality tomatoes is quite simple. A fully ripened tomato cannot be shipped any distance. Any grower who has to ship his product is forced to harvest tomatoes before they are ripe so they will not bruise. In truth, the blame for poor tasting tomatoes lies not so much with the grower but with subsequent handlers and even the consumer.

Tomatoes picked before they are fully ripe can develop an appetizing flavor and texture if two basic conditions are met. First, the tomatoes must not be refrigerated. They should be stored at room temperature or at least above 55 degrees Fahrenheit. Unripe tomatoes that have been subjected to temperatures below this level will never ripen satisfactorily.

The second condition is patience. Tomatoes that are on the pink side need to wait a day or more to develop a deep-red color (and the desired tomato flavor). They should also soften slightly. Only when they have fully ripened like this should they be refrigerated and only if necessary. Refrigerated tomatoes will have a better eating flavor if they are allowed to warm to room temperature before serving.

Pennsylvania growers use various cultural techniques to produce tomatoes early in the season when consumers are anxiously awaiting the flavor of homegrown tomatoes. Some growers utilize plastic mulch and plastic tunnels to push their tomato crops for early production. The tunnels may be just two to three feet high covering one row or high enough to walk in covering several rows. The latter are referred to as high tunnels and are essentially temporary, unheated greenhouses erected in the field until warmer weather comes.

Other growers put small individual caps over each plant to guard it from late spring frosts and capture extra warmth from the early season sun. Recently, plastic caps that are filled with water have been developed. The water absorbs heat from the sun during the day and holds it during the night to promote early growth of the tomato plant and provide extra frost protection. These methods work to bring on that first batch of red ripe tomatoes just a little bit sooner when the market is better.

Pennsylvania's fresh market tomato crop is grown on about 4,000 acres. Another 1,400 acres are used to grow tomatoes for food processors for use in several brands of tomato products. In addition, about 20 acres of Pennsylvania greenhouses produce tomatoes during the spring and fall months when they cannot be grown in the field. Those acreages rank Pennsylvania fifth nationally in the production of processing tomatoes and eighth in the production of fresh market tomatoes. In number of acres, tomatoes trail sweet corn, potatoes, snap beans and pumpkins as a leading Pennsylvania vegetable crop. However, in 2000 they were first in terms of value.

Pennsylvania tomatoes come in a variety of shapes, sizes and colors. The most common is the larger round, red tomato that can be sliced for sandwiches or burgers, cut in wedges for eating directly, diced for salads or tacos, or cooked into numerous kinds of sauces. Small round tomatoes, also called cherry or grape tomatoes depending on their size, are perfect for salads or as a garnish. Plum tomatoes (sometimes called Italian or Roma tomatoes) are the choice for preparing secret family-recipe sauces as they cook down to a thicker sauce.

Leading food and medical authorities recommend eating three to five servings of vegetables each day. Fresh tomatoes provide an excellent source of vitamins and minerals. In fact, one medium tomato supplies over 40 percent of the daily allowance of vitamin C and 20 percent of vitamin A plus potassium — all with only 35 calories.

Noted Lancaster County cookbook author Betty Groff offers the following recipes to help you include tomatoes with a different flavor in your menus.

MARINATED TOMATOES AND ONIONS

2 pounds firm tomatoes, cored and sliced
2 medium onions, sliced
2 tablespoons chopped herbs (dill, chives, oregano, parsley, thyme, etc.)
½ cup salad oil
½ cup cider vinegar
¼ cup white wine
¼ cup granulated sugar
½ teaspoon salt
• Several dashes freshly ground pepper
Fresh parsley for garnish

Put the tomatoes in a large bowl. Place the onions on top. Sprinkle the herbs on top. In a small bowl, blend the oil, vinegar, wine, sugar, salt, and pepper with a wire whisk until all the sugar is dissolved. Pour over the tomatoes and onions. Cover with plastic wrap and refrigerate for several hours. Serve chilled, garnished with fresh parsley. Serves six.

GAZPACHO
(Spanish Cold Vegetable Soup)

5 tomatoes, peeled and coarsely chopped
2 medium cucumbers, peeled and coarsely chopped
1 large onion, coarsely chopped
1 medium green pepper, cleaned and coarsely chopped
2 teaspoons finely chopped garlic
4 cups coarsely crumbled French or Italian bread, trimmed of crust
4 cups cold water or 2 cups water and 2 cups chicken broth
¼ cup red wine vinegar
2 teaspoons salt
4 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon tomato paste
Garnish

Garnish:

1 cup ¼" bread cubes, trimmed of crusts and toasted in oven till crisp
½ cup finely chopped onions
½ cup peeled and finely chopped cucumbers
½ cup finely chopped green peppers

In a deep bowl, combine tomatoes, cucumbers, onion, green peppers, garlic, and crumbled bread; mix together thoroughly. Stir in water, vinegar, and salt. Ladle the mixture, two cups at a time, into blender or food processor and blend at high speed for one minute, or until reduced to a smooth puree. Pour into bowl and with a whisk, beat in the olive oil and tomato paste.

Cover the bowl tightly with foil or plastic wrap, and refrigerate for two or more hours, until thoroughly chilled. Before serving, stir the soup lightly to recombine it. Ladle into a large chilled tureen or into individual soup plates.

Serve the gazpacho with the bread cubes and the vegetable garnishes, presented in separate serving bowls to be added to the soup at the discretion of each diner. Serves six to eight.

CHILI

1 pound lean ground beef or chuck
1 tablespoon butter
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup onion, chopped
½ cup green pepper, chopped
3 cups diced tomatoes in sauce
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 cups canned kidney beans
2 cups great northern beans
• Dash of tabasco
Grated cheddar cheese and chopped onion for topping

Brown hamburger in skillet and drain off fat. Transfer the meat to a large saucepan or crockpot. Melt butter in skillet and lightly brown the onions. Add them to the meat along with the salt and diced tomatoes, beans, and tabasco and simmer for one to two hours. The longer it cooks the better it gets. Some people like it even better reheated a day or so later.

The following tomato bread recipe is from Marion G. Walker, Carmichaels, who won third-place in the 2002 Pennsylvania Farm Show "Simply Delicious" Vegetable Quick Bread Contest.

FIESTA TOMATO BASIL BREAD

2 cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup (2 medium) chopped plum tomatoes
¼ cup plain yogurt
¼ cup chopped basil
½ chopped onions
½ cup Parmesan cheese
2 tablespoons butter softened
1 egg
2 tablespoons milk

Combine dry ingredients. Then add remaining ingredients and mix well. Pour into 9" x 5" loaf pan sprayed with vegetable oil. Bake at 400 degrees Fahrenheit for 30 minutes.

Well Preserved

Food Preservation Then and Now

This column has emphasized science-based canning practices to ensure high quality products and safety of the food. We hear comments that indicate that some unsafe canning practices are still being used. Here is information for you to compare the methods you are using with current scientific standards for canning.

While the open kettle canning method of filling boiling food into sterilized jars with no additional processing was common years ago, it is no longer considered safe because the air in the headspace can contain mold and bacteria that can cause spoilage.

Processing kills mold spores. All foods need processing. High acid foods can be processed in a boiling water bath and low acid vegetables and meats need to be processed in a pressure canner.

People who are still using the open kettle method to can pickles, jams, and jellies are taking unnecessary chances of a lower quality product and of food spoiling.

Old canning books include instructions for water bath canning of low acid foods such as green beans for several hours. It takes the correct time and temperature combination to destroy pathogens. Low acid foods require the higher temperatures that can only be obtained in a pressure canner to destroy pathogens. The three to four hours in boiling water previously used is not safe.

Oven canning is a dangerous practice that should never be used. Canning jars are designed to withstand boiling water temperatures. Glass is sensitive to sudden temperature changes. Jars in the oven can explode. Hot air is not as efficient in heat treating foods as steam or boiling water. Foods are under processed in the oven and clostridium botulinum bacteria are not destroyed. Tightening jar lids after processing is a carryover from using zinc lids and jar rubbers. Today's two-piece lids should not be adjusted after processing. Boiling jar lids before using them is no longer recommended by lid manufacturers. Sealing compounds have changed over the years. Follow directions on the jar lid box.

Most two-piece lids need only to be heated to 180 degrees F. Boiling lids before putting them on the jar can damage their sealing ability.

Tomatoes are generally considered to be one of the easiest foods to can. Older schedules used to process tomatoes for only 10 to 20 minutes in the water bath. Current recommendations are 45 to 85 minutes in the water bath for tomatoes that have been acidified with lemon juice of citric acid. Tomatoes are not as high acid as previously thought.

To ensure safety, acidify quarts with two tablespoons bottled lemon juice or ½ teaspoon citric acid and process quarts 45 minutes in the boiling water canner if packed in water or 85 minutes if packed in their own juice. (Juice is more dense than water and more tomatoes are packed into the jar to form the juice).

Do not use canning schedules prior to 1994.

Many people still use paraffin to seal jams and jellies. This is not recommended because paraffin is temperature sensitive and often breaks loose from the edge of the jar resulting in mold formation on the jam or jelly. Discard moldy food. Mold can produce mycotoxins which may be carcinogens.

Water bath processing will sterilize the headspace and kill mold spores. Put jams and jellies in canning jars and use new two-piece lids and process ten minutes in a boiling water bath. Some newer methods are also considered unsafe. A steam canner looks like an upside-down boiling water bath canner. The base is a shallow pan with a rack that is covered with a dome lid. A small amount of boiling water is supposed to fill the dome lid with steam that heats the jars. However, safe processing times have not been developed and steam canners are not recommended for either high or low acid foods.

The microwave oven has limited use in food preservation. It can be used to heat canning and pickling liquids and for making microwave jams or jellies if the recipes used are specifically developed for the microwave oven. However, recipes developed for one microwave oven may not work in another because of differences between the microwave ovens themselves. It cannot be used instead of a boiling water bath or pressure canner for processing canned goods.

Some people try to be innovative in the use of slow cookers and other small appliances. These methods can be extremely dangerous and are not recommended. Products sold as canning powders are useless as preservative and do not replace the need for proper heat processing.

Breathe Easier Campaign Raises Asthma Awareness

Asthma Doesn't Slow Down Four-Year-Old

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

HELLERTOWN (Northampton Co.) — When Kyle Bamboo was four months old, he had his first wheezing and coughing episode. Many more followed.

At first doctors attributed his symptoms to colds. By the time he was one-year-old his parents, David and Kelly Bamboo, knew his continual illnesses were more than a cold.

"It was difficult to take him outside because his coughing attacks were so severe. I saw other children his age enjoying the outdoors, but Kyle couldn't keep up. I knew something was wrong," Kelly said.

The one-year-old was referred to an allergist, who diagnosed him as being allergic to cats, dust, molds, and pollen. These allergens caused asthma attacks. Asthma is a lung disease that can be life threatening, and is characterized by excessive sensitivity of the lungs to various stimuli.

According to Dr. Kathleen Ververeli, assistant clinical professor of pediatrics at Hershey Medical School, asthma is the leading serious chronic illness among children.

Although asthma can be life threatening, most children suffer mild to moderate problems that can be controlled by treatment at home or in the doctor's office.

"Kyle is one of the lucky ones," his mom said.

His asthma is controlled through medication, which allows him to live a perfectly normal life. He now enjoys the outdoors, and the family even has a cat.

Asthma breathing problems usually happen in episodes but the inflammation underlying asthma is continuous and often results in narrowed airways.

Not every person who has asthma is born with the disease. Diana Nyad, a National Women's Sports Hall of Famer, serves as spokesperson for the Breathe Easier campaign to help raise awareness about pediatric asthma and the proper management and treatment.

Nyad is best known for setting the world record for her two-day, 102.5-mile swim from the Bahamas to Florida.

Nyad, 53, said that 25 years ago she caught a cold that persisted for years. Eventually she was diagnosed with asthma.

"I didn't believe it. I went everywhere looking for answers. Finally I admitted it, and got treatment," Nyad said.

Medication enables her to keep the asthma under control. "Now I can do anything," she said. "I want to get the word out that asthma medications available today do not have dangerous side effects. One does not become immune to it."

Bamboo said that often parents think their child has a cold or is sick.

According to Ververeli, a child who has three episodes of wheezing is considered at risk for asthma and should be tested.

Parents who do not realize their child has asthma put their child at more risk. Asthma is the number one cause of hospitalization among children under the age of 15. It is also the leading cause of school absenteeism.

But it doesn't need to be that way according to Nyad, Bamboo, and Ververeli. All three maintain that treatment is available.

"We are not pushing one particular medication," Ververeli said. "We only want to make parents aware that there is help. A good doctor will find a medication that works for the child.

According to the American Lung Association of Pennsylvania, more than 750,000 people have asthma in Pennsylvania. Almost 150,000 of them are children.

Children who grow up on farms often fare better with overcoming asthma than city-bred children according to Ververeli.

Studies are being conducted but the unproven theory is that children who grow up on farms develop an immunity against many triggers.

"There's lots of support out there," Bamboo said. As a mother and a part-time nurse practitioner, Bamboo said that she enjoys talking with parents of children diagnosed with asthma.

Kelly Bamboo is grateful for medication that enables her son Kyle, 4, to live an active life despite being diagnosed with chronic asthma. Daughter Brynn, 2, is asthma free.

"I like to encourage children that asthma doesn't need to keep them from participating in sports and leading an active lifestyle," Nyad said. "Active sports help develop lung capacity.

"Children with asthma can do anything they want. I want to get that word out to the young," Nyad said.

Food For Better Eyesight?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The conventional belief that carrots are good for your eyes has a lot of truth to it. Beta carotene, a form of vitamin A, is plentiful in carrots as well as other fruits and vegetables, and it's essential for good eyesight.

It works like this: Vitamin A takes three forms in the body — retinal, retinol and retinoic acid. You might guess that all three protect the eye's retina. For example, the eye uses retinal to adapt from bright light to darkness and back again. As that process takes place, some retinal is lost and has to be replaced by retinol from the bloodstream. Retinoic acid helps cells in the eyes and elsewhere to mature.

Two other carotenoids, lutein and zeaxanthin, may help, too. They're pigments that accumulate in the eye and may act like built-in sunglasses, filtering damaging forms of light and protecting the eye against cell damage. These carotenoids are abundant in leafy green vegetables such as kale, spinach and collard greens, and, in lesser amounts in corn, peas, squash, pumpkin, red grapes, cucumbers, celery, broccoli, green beans, and many other fruits and vegetables.

But don't forget to eat some fish or a bit of meat — or take a multivitamin — for good eye health, too. That's where you'll find zinc, which you can also find in healthy retinal tissue.

In fact, a study published last year in the Archives of Ophthalmology indicates that a high-dose zinc/antioxidant supplement may help reduce the progression of age-related macular degeneration, a major cause of sight loss and blindness especially in people over age 65. However, unlike beta carotene and vitamin A, there's little evidence that taking supplemental zinc can prevent eye disease, and high levels of zinc can be harmful.

Be sure to eat a well-balanced diet and check with your doctor before taking any kind of supplement beyond a multivitamin.

ANSWER — A Lancaster County reader wanted a recipe for watermelon wine and for other flavors. Thanks to Donald Truett for sending the following wine recipe that can be used for a variety of fruits.

Fruit Wines

2 pounds fruit
2 pounds sugar

ANSWER — A Lebanon County reader is looking for a ketchup recipe that was printed last year called "Mother-in-law's Delicious Ketchup." Thanks to Pam Mummert, Glen Rock, for sending a recipe.

Mother-In-Law's Delicious Ketchup

2 gallons uncooked tomato chunks
2 onions

Boil together tomato chunks and onions. Put through tomato strainer. Add:

5 tablespoons salt
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
2 cups vinegar

Boil one hour, add:

6 cups sugar
7 tablespoons Clear Jel

Boil mixture an additional hour. Fill pint jars, adjust lid, and process 15 minutes in boiling water bath.

Lemon Fluff

1 can evaporated milk, ice cold
3-ounce package lemon Jell-O

Dissolve Jell-O in ¾ cup sugar and 1½ cups boiling water. Add juice and rind of one lemon. When mixture is jelled, whip until light and fluffy. Whip the ice cold evaporated milk until the consistency of stiff whipped cream. Add the Jell-O mixture to the whipped milk, and beat until well mixed. Serve with graham cracker crumbs. (Before I beat the milk, I put the mixing bowl and beaters in the refrigerator for a little so they are cold when you put the milk in the bowl. The colder the milk, the better it will beat.

ANSWER — Betty Hopkins said that an elderly friend, who is no longer living, used to make cucumber salad that "was out of this world." Betty remembers the cucumbers were sliced very thin and boiled. She thinks onions were included. Thanks to Patricia Pfleegor for sending a recipe; however the cucumbers are not boiled before using. If anyone has a recipe requiring the recipes to be boiled, please send it in.

Cucumber Salad

3 large cucumbers, sliced thin
1 large onion, sliced in thin rings and halved
⅓ cup vinegar
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
1⅓ cups water

Combine vinegar, sugar, salt and water in a salad bowl. (Adjust the vinegar/sugar ratio to suit your taste). Blend thoroughly. Add cucumbers and onions. Chill in refrigerator until ready to serve. This makes a sweet and tart flavor, which Patricia thinks is best. Makes enough for a large family.

21-ounce can apple pie filling
3 eggs
1 cup milk
10 slices day-old bread
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 tablespoons melted butter

⅛ teaspoon cinnamon
1 small container vanilla yogurt

Spoon pie filling into greased 9x13-inch baking pan. In a bowl, beat eggs, milk, and vanilla. Dip bread slices into egg mixture. Arrange two rows of five slices bread, overlapping slices slightly in baking dish with pie filling. Brush bread with melted butter and sprinkle with cinnamon and sugar.

Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes or until lighly browned. Cut into squares and serve fruit side up with several spoonfuls of yogurt.

ANSWER — Rosalie Nolt requested a recipe for New England clam chowder, similar to Friendly's or Campbell's soup. Thanks to Ruth Nolt, Leola, for sending this recipe, which she likes although it isn't the recipe from Friendly's or Campbell's.

Favorite Fish Chowder

1 large onion, chopped
¼-½ cup butter
4 cups water
6 cups peeled, diced potatoes
2 pounds fish fillets, cut into chunks
2-3 tablepsoons lemon juice
4 cups milk
½ cup dry milk
2½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon pepper
Chopped fresh parsley

Saute onion in butter. Add water and bring to boil. Add potatoes, cook for 10 minutes. Add fish and lemon juice; reduce heat and simmer for 10 minutes.

Add milk, dry milk, salt, and pepper. Heat. Garnish with parsley and serve.

Fish is easy to cut into chunks if half frozen. A smiliar recipe, Ruth uses, includes 1 cup corn, ¼ teaspoon sage, and ¼ teaspoon thyme. Rosalie may want to experiment to acquire the flavor she prefers.

Do Leftovers Improve In Flavor?

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Some people believe that stews and soups always taste better after spending a day in the refrigerator, but other people despise leftovers, whether it's day-old meatloaf or yesterday's stew.

Many people believe that homemade foods such as soups, stews, chili and spaghetti sauce taste better after cooking them on the stove, and letting them sit in the refrigerator overnight. However, the scientific reasoning behind this phenomenon isn't clear-cut.

Many food scientists believe "flavor blending" is at work. That is, when you mix different ingredients together and add herbs and spices, their distinct flavors begin to merge. The longer they're together, the more they mingle. If scientists were to measure the compounds that produce the food's overall taste, they would initially find many spikes and peaks of the distinct flavors. Over time, those spikes and peaks would dissipate as the flavors combined. The chili powder in chili would become less harsh; the beans in the mix would be less 'beany" but more flavorful from the spices, tomatoes, and meat.

What's happening is that the chemicals and oils that produce flavor and aroma are being released from the different ingredients. That doesn't always happen quickly, and it may not totally occur while the food cooks.

You can see that kind of occurrence at work with the new "Magic Twist" Kool-Aid drinks. For example, the "Changin' Cherry" flavor starts green and turns blue — although it always tastes like cherry.

How does it work? It uses two colorings — one yellow and the other blue. The initial color is a blend of the two, making the drink green. As more of the less-soluble blue coloring agent gets released, it overwhelms the yellow dye, changing the color of the beverage to blue.

A similar but more subtle type of thing happens with flavor compounds: Some may take longer than others to be released.

Another factor also may affect the flavor of leftovers: As you reheat the food, more water is released as steam. That alone can intensify the flavor of your favorite soup, making you think it tastes better the next day.

Teachers Participate In 'Ag in the Classroom' Workshop

WESTMINSTER, Md. — About 50 elementary teachers from across the state gathered in Westminster in June for "Ag in the Classroom" Workshop presented by the Maryland Agricultural Education Foundation. Ag industry professionals from Maryland and New Jersey came together to present hundreds of educational ideas and materials to the teachers for use in their classrooms in the coming year. Teachers left the workshop loaded down with books, videos, curriculum materials, handouts and more that focus on infusing agricultural concepts into students' reading, writing, science, math and social studies curriculum.

The seminar provided five action-packed days of seminars, field trips, demonstrations and hands-on activities. Seminars include Food Doesn't Grow in the Supermarket, Maryland Map Making, Simple Soy Science — The Magical Bean, Sheepy Shenanigans, Barnyard Basics, Kids Growing with Grains, Up From Soil, Kitchen Science, Learning from Pass Around Plans, Why's and How's of Dairy & Nutrition Education and Everything You Wanted to Know About Beef.

Field trips included a behind-the-scenes tour of Baugher's Orchard and Bakery in Westminster, a hands-on experience with farm animals presented by the Carroll County 4-H Club, a visit to the Carroll County Farm Museum and an extensive tour of Edrich Lumber in Randallstown where the teachers had the opportunity to see the timbering industry from log to lumber to milling to furniture making and recycling.

The teachers got their hands dirty with seminars on the importance of soil and soil stewardship, making a topiary and building their own crates of Maryland agricultural products. Members of the Maryland Agriculture Teachers Association conducted these workshops at Francis Scott Key High School.

Teachers also had the opportunity to tour the mobile Biotechnology: Food, Fiber and You science lab that visits schools throughout the state where students get the opportunity for hands-on activities teaching them about Maryland agriculture. Two other mobile labs available from the Foundation include the Ag Products lab and the Aquatic lab.

Founded in 1989, MAEF is a non-profit organization that promotes and enhances the understanding and appreciation of agriculture in the daily lives of Marylanders.

World Famous Clydesdale Horses Coming To Maryland State Fair

TIMONIUM, Md. — Maryland State Fairgoers will have a special opportunity for a close-up look at the Budweiser Clydesdale horses during the 121st Maryland State Fair. The 6-foot tall, 2000 pound "gentle giants" will be stabled at the Maryland State Fair Horse Show Ring Barns during the Friday, Aug. 23 to Monday, Sept. 2 run of the Maryland State Fair. The horses will be available for viewing during Fair hours and handlers will be on hand to answer questions. Performance times will be determined daily and announced by the drivers at the Horse Show Ring Barn.

The colorful history of the special Clydesdale breed begins in the early 19th century along the River Clyde in Lanarkshire, Scotland. The region, located near a valley, or "dale," was known for its rich soil and abundant crops. The farmers along the River Clyde were in need of strong horses for hauling, plowing and carting farm equipment and workers. One of the Dukes of Hamilton, a wealthy landowner, imported six Great Flemish horses to the region and made them available for breeding to local mares, and the Clydesdale breed was born. People from outside Lanarkshire began to refer to the big horses that were more powerful than any horses available before as "the Clydesman's horse," a name that eventually became "Clydesdale." The horses were capable of pulling loads of more than a ton at a walking speed of five miles an hour. It was the breed's hauling power that attracted North Americans to the Clydesdale breed. Today's Budweiser Clydesdales are even bigger than their Scottish ancestors standing approximately 18 hands high (about 6 feet) and weighing 2,000 pounds.

The 121st Maryland State Fair, which offers a variety of livestock and horse shows, midway rides, thoroughbred horse racing, arts and crafts and home arts exhibits, runs from Friday, Aug. 23 through Monday, Sept. 2, at the Timonium Fairgrounds in Baltimore County. Early risers are welcome to attend livestock and horse shows at 9 a.m. Exhibit halls are open from 10 a.m.-10 p.m. The Midway opens at 10 a.m. on weekends and noon on weekdays. Admission is only $5 for adults and children under 12 are admitted free. Rides are individually priced. Thoroughbred horse racing begins Sat., Aug. 24 with live races daily beginning at 1 p.m., with the exception of Monday, Aug. 26 and Tuesday, Aug. 27 when there will be no live racing. In addition, Timonium will simulcast races all 10 days from a variety of other tracks around the country. Admission to the racetrack is included in the admission price of the Fair. The Fairgrounds encourages use of the Light Rail with an easily accessible Light Rail stop at the Fairgrounds' Cow Palace Gate. For general information, call (410) 252-0200, ext. 227 or visit the Maryland State Fair Website at marylandstatefair.com.

Americans are eating more seafood because good fresh seafood is readily available. It is convenient, quick to prepare, and very nutritious. Seafood is rich in protein, vitamins and minerals, all essential for good health. What's more, it is naturally lean.

Most seafood is also low in cholesterol. Contrary to earlier beliefs, recent analyses show that mollusks such a clams, mussels, oysters, and scallops are also low in cholesterol. While the crustaceans lobster, crab, and shrimp have slightly more cholesterol (about the same as in the dark meat of chicken, somewhat higher for shrimp), they are low in total fat and moderate portions can be easily managed in a low-cholesterol diet.

High in protein, seafood is an excellent source of protein. It contains all the essential amino acids that the body cannot manufacture but must get from food. Generally speaking, a four-ounce portion of cooked fish will provide half of the protein the body needs each day to build and replenish itself.

Furthermore, it is easily digested protein. Depending on the kind of fish, 87 to 98 percent of the protein is utilized because of the nature of the muscle fibers percent in seafood. That makes seafood an ideal source of protein for people of all ages.

Rich in minerals and vitamins, seafood is a particularly rich source of minerals, although amounts vary according to the kind of fish, and where and when it is caught. Fish contains most of the chemical elements naturally present in seawater such as iron, copper, fluorine, and calcium. In particular, sardines and canned salmon are two excellent sources of calcium. For instance, a three-ounce portion of sardines (with bones) contains about 371 mg. of calcium and a three-ounce portion of canned salmon contains 191 mg. of calcium.

Seafood is the richest source of iodine as well as potassium, two minerals required for proper body functions. The oils present in fish are the richest know sources of fat-soluble vitamins A and D.

The sodium level of fresh and salt water finfish is comparable to other animal foods such as beef and chicken. Shellfish have slightly higher amounts of sodium, but they can be included in most sodium-restricted diets in moderate amounts. On the other hand, canning or curing fish adds salt.

Commercially prepared frozen fish dishes are often high in sodium, while plain fresh or plain frozen fish present no problem for people on reduced-sodium diets. It is always advisable to read the package labels for processed or prepared fish dishes to detect sodium content.

The greatest virtue of seafood is that it is low in total fat and calories. A four-ounce raw portion contains about 100 calories.

In addition, seafood lends itself to low-calorie preparation. It can be poached, baked, or steamed with your favorite herbs and spices; or it can be grilled and just lightly brushed with oil to keep it moist. Fish pairs well with other low-calorie foods, such as light sauces and steamed vegetables.

Seafood is generally low in saturated fat, suggesting that it can help lower cholesterol levels in the bloodstream. Most seafoods are relatively low in dietary cholesterol including mollusks, which were once considered "high" in this substance. The Omega-3 fatty acids in fish may actually lower the triglycerides in the blood. In large quantities, they also help prevent the formation of blood clots.

Cholesterol is a waxy substance that is manufactured in small amounts by the body. It is carried to and from the body organs and tissues in protein envelopes; the entire package is called a lipoprotein. Low density lipoproteins (LDLs) deliver cholesterol to the organs; high-density lipoproteins (HDLs) carry the excess away.

Cholesterol is necessary for certain body functions, but when too much of it gets into the blood steam, it tends to form fatty plaque deposits on the walls of the arteries and the blood vessels lose their elasticity. In this condition, know as atherosclerosis, the blood vessels become narrow and clogged. When arteries carrying blood to the heart are blocked, a heart attack can take place; if those to the brain are involved, a stroke may occur.

Eating more seafood in place of traditional high fat foods can lower the risk of cardiovascular disease, primarily by reducing the intake of total fat and saturated fat.

Pa. Fair's Best Chocolate Cake

Chocolate Mint Sensation

2 cups sugar
3 cups sifted flour
6 tablespoons Hershey cocoa
2 teaspoons baking soda
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons vinegar
½ cup oil
2 teaspoons vanilla
2 cups cold water
Hershey's cocoa for coating purposes

Mint Cream Filling

2 cups confectioners' sugar, sifted
½ cup soft butter
2 tablespoons Cream De Mint or mint flavoring milk

Glaze

6 ounces Hershey's chocolate chips
4 tablespoons butter

For batter, sift together the sugar, flour, Hershey's cocoa, baking soda, and salt in a large bowl. Blend well. In a medium-sized bowl, combine vinegar, oil, vanilla and water and beat until smooth. Add this to the dry ingredients and beat until smooth, scraping sides of bowl often.

Grease two 9-inch cake pans and lightly coated with Hershey's cocoa. Shake out the excess cocoa.

Divide the batter evenly, between the two pans.

Bake at 350 degrees Fahrenheit for 30-35 minutes, or until a toothpick comes out clean.

Cool 10 minutes and remove from pan to a wire rack, letting it cool completely before placing the filling between the layers. Save a small amount of the filling and place on the top of the cake, then pour over the top.

For filling, combine the confectioners' sifted sugar, butter, and Cream De Mint with a few drops of milk to make the filling spreadable.

For glaze, combine the chocolate chips and butter in a small saucepan over low heat, stirring constantly until melted, or in the microwave oven in a small microwave proof bowl for 30-45 seconds, or just until melted. Stir until smooth. Let cool until lukewarm, and carefully pour over the top mint filling. Carefully spread evenly letting some run down the sides of the cake. Garnish with fresh mint leaves, chocolate curls, or chocolate leaves.

National Plowing Contest Highlights Old Tyme Days Aug. 22-25

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MANCHESTER (York Co.) — "We see plowing as an art. But it's becoming a lost art because almost everyone is using no-till now," Clarence Nace said.

For Nace and many of his buddies, the steady drone of tractors and freshly plowed soil is one of the most exciting sounds and sights to experience. During the last few weeks plowing buffs have been gearing up for one of the largest plowing demonstrations in the world — the USA National Plowing Contest — scheduled to take place at the 18th annual Olde Tyme Days, one mile north of Manchester along Route 181, August 21-25.

Bob Rentzel, president of Old Tyme Days, said that Old Tyme Days was established in 1985 so that traditions and activities that were once part of rural and small-town life could again be experienced once a year. Two years later, in 1987, the members of the Olde Tyme Days acclimated the Pennsylvania State Plowing Contest into the annual event. From 3,000-5,000 people attend.

This year Olde Tyme Days will host the national plowing contest.

"People will come from all over the world," said Richard Penay, Liverpool, secretary of the state board and state representative for both national and world boards of the National Plowing Contest.

"The plowman and the plow make all the difference," Penay said. "He must plow straight, have the equipment in shape, have the plow mechanically set to do the job, and have new shear to cut the soil.

Rentzel has been involved in tractor shows since he was 16 years old. Although the competition is stiff, Rentzel said everything is done in friendly competition.

"We help each other out," he said of unforeseen problems such as a low tire or a broken cylinder.

Contestants bring their own plows, but tractors are provided. Four classes of plows are determined by size starting with 2-3 furrows and open classes. Plots plowed are 40-feet wide for most contests but 80-feet wide for the large plows.

The Pennsylvania plowing contests are scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday Aug. 21-22 and the national contest is Friday and Saturday Aug. 23-24.

The national winners in the small and large plow categories, are eligible to compete in the world contest to be held in Switzerland and to defend their titles at next year's national contest.

The final championship pulling takes place Saturday night when the bands are playing. "It's exciting," Rentzel said of the fanfare that accomplishes the competition.

An antique class includes models from 1937 and older, and even horse-drawn plows are demonstrated.

More than 100 acres have been set aside to a wide variety of activities during the five-day event.

Members are assured that plowing interest will not fade away. They have a category for 16 years old and younger to plow using garden tractors.

Four action-packed days are planned for every age group. Kids activities include pedal tractor pulls, petting zoo, hay rides, and more.

Not everything is farm related. Helicopter rides, antique cars, Civil War Reenactment Camp, all-day Thursday auction, flea market, musical entertainment, and more are scheduled.

Equipment parades, ongoing field activities using horse power and new farm equipment and displays will be featured throughout the five days.

Pa. Deputy Secretary Russ Redding is schedule to speak on Saturday night.

Admission is $2 a person, under 10 years of age free. "We want it to remain a family activity and an educational event to teach people how to plow so we keep the charge low enough so the whole family can attend," Rentzel said.

"Good food and primitive camping on grounds are also available.

The event is conducted on the Blaine Rentzel farm, 5300 N. George St., one mile north of Manchester on Route 181, five miles off I-83 and I-76.

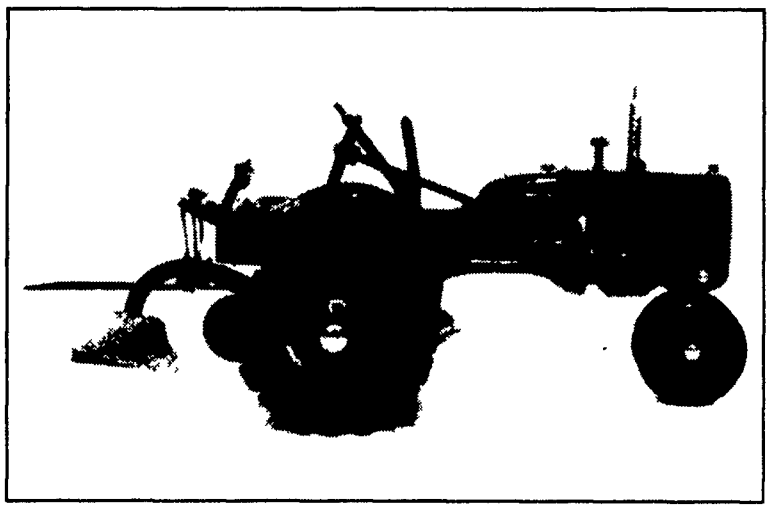
Installing fences for the upcoming Olde Tyme Days are Larry Anderson, Manchester; Todd Howdyshell, York, and Harry Hall, Lewisbury.

Clarence Nace still farms with this 5-farrow plow, which also enables him to win numerous trophies in plowing contests.

Kids also have a chance to show off their plowing skills in a special contest designed for them. Here Keith Ahrens, 12, Manchester, uses a 12 horsepower Economy Tractor.

Jay Stoner, Mechanicsburg, plows with a 1936 Allis Chambers while other plowing aficionados watch.



Limited quantity of this 1⅛6 scale tractor model, an Allis-Chalmers C tractor with single bottom mounted plow, is available during Olde Tyme Days. Or send your complete address and a check for $58 plus $6 for shipping to Pa. State Plowing Contest Committee, 548 Miller Rd., Millersburg, PA 17061.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

Summer is the time for picnics and reunions. Our family combined the two and met in a community park. Our group seems to be getting smaller instead of larger as the young people are not attending. Some have a legitimate excuse as they live hundreds of miles away. While others simply plan to visit the shore or stay at home and work.

Sometimes one wonders if the effort of planning a reunion is worth it. But then we go home with new knowledge of our extended families doings, and it all seems worthwhile. If only a few young couples come, there are not enough children to play.

However, there is always an abundance of food. There are several kinds of salad and lots of cakes and some pies. People always appreciate several kinds of drinks. We took a jug of ice water and it was soon emptied.

One young man drove from New York City, one couple from New Jersey, and one from western Pennsylvania. The other folks were local, but it seems we need a special reason to get together.

Fifty years ago my parents started this reunion to celebrate the birthdays of my father and my uncle. Sometimes friends were invited too. At that time we met in our meadow along the Conestoga River. Then it was called a creek. My father built a rather primitive stone fireplace to roast hot dogs and heat food.

We took pictures and the babies in playpens are now grandparents. It seems that time keeps rolling along, and as they say about the river — "Men may come and men may go but I go on forever."

Reading Fair Posts Baking Contest Results

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — At the recent Reading Fair 7 cookies, 13 cakes, 18 vegetable quick breads and 13 pies were entered in the baking contests at the fair. This year marked the first year for the vegetable quick bread competition.

Also new this year is the auction to sell the top-placing baked goods, according to Reading Fair volunteer Helen Readinger. First, second, and third-place baked goods were auctioned off, with proceeds going to the Reading Fair. Baked goods not in the top three places went to inmates at the Berks County Prison.

Phillip Bleiler won fist place in the Hershey's Chocolate Cookies division. Amanda Kurtz won second and Steven Bleiler took third in the contest.

In the apple pie contest, Kristyn Culley won first place. Christine Landis won second place, and Minnie Schlegel won third place.

In the Hershey's Cocoa Cake contest, Theresa Bieber won the contest, followed by Sharon Kurtz with second place and Donna Kramer in third.

One-Stop Lawn, Gardening Advice At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Home gardeners and professional growers can get answers to any kind of question related to home landscaping and the cut-flower business at Ag Progress Days, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, Aug. 20-22.

Penn State specialists in horticulture, plant pathology, entomology and turfgrass will be on hand at the Landscape, Lawn and Garden "Ask the Experts" tent on East 7th St. at the Ag Progress Days site.

The demonstration gardens will showcase new sunflower varieties, a few other annual cut flowers, some perennial plants, and several varieties of woody plants popular in the cut-flower market. "The sunflowers in this year's trial include some with unique flower colors and multiple flowers on each plant," said Robert Berghage, associate professor of horticulture.

New this year is a small demonstration high tunnel for growing cut flowers. A high tunnel can provide protection for commercial field-grown cut flowers, protecting the crop from damaging winds and rains. "A heavy rain can really wreck a cut flower crop. Saving just one cutting of some high-value flowers often can pay for the tunnel," said Berghage.

"Cut flowers really have piqued the interest of farmers and others as a cash crop that can be sold at farmer's markets and other outlets," Berghage said. "The cash return on a small, well-managed plot of flowers is a lot more than you would get from an acre of corn."

Flower-arranging demonstrations using locally grown cut flowers will be held daily in the tent at 11 a.m. and 2 p.m., with an additional demonstration at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, Aug. 21. Producing flower arrangements and bouquets can add value to farmers market and roadside cut flower sales.

Penn State faculty and cooperative extension agents also can help diagnose your plant, insect and mite problems. "Bring samples of turf, plants or insects for an on-the-spot evaluation," Berghage said. "If we can't solve the problem immediately, we'll examine it further at a lab on campus and get back to you with a diagnosis and suggestions."

Examples of infested plant material and other problems that affect the health of plants will be a part of this educational display. Additional advice will be available on indoor plants, tillage, mulching, flowers, tree fruit, woody ornamentals and vegetables.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days is conducted at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday. Admission and parking are free.

For more information, call (800) PSU-1010 toll-free through Aug. 22 or visit the Ag Progress Days Website at http://apd.cas.psu.edu.

Solanco Certified To Teach Outdoor Equipment Repair

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Solanco has become the first high school in Pennsylvania to receive certification to train students in the repair of two- and four-stroke gasoline engines.

The Equipment & Engine Training Council (EETC) has provided Solanco with its Outdoor Power Equipment (OPE) accreditation.

As has been done in the past, the Solanco Agricultural Education Department will offer an agricultural mechanics curriculum that features instruction on how to service and repair most air-cooled, engine-powered lawn and garden equipment. The difference for this and future years is that the curriculum has been recognized by the EETC as meeting its standards for accreditation.

Solanco successfully met the following requirements for OPE accreditation from the EETC: completion of the Outdoor Power Equipment two-stroke and four-stroke engine certification tests; an OPE certified instructor is on staff; the curriculum will include specific hands-on activities, theory labs, and practical application of knowledge; and the Solanco Agricultural Education Department is equipped with necessary hand tools, work areas, and a dynamic engine test stand.

Other than Solanco the only other OPE-accredited school in the county is the Lancaster County Career and Technology Center.

Bid On Antiques, Ice Cream At Ag Progress' Silent Auction

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Bargain-hunters should expect the unexpected when the Pasto Agricultural Museum holds its third silent auction during Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Tuesday, Aug. 20 and Wednesday, Aug. 21. About 150 items, from Penn State/Nebraska football tickets to a new John Deere lawn tractor, have been donated, according to museum curator Darwin Braund.

"Buyers will find items to meet practically any interest, need, and checking account," Braund says. "Donors have been very generous in supplying a variety of useful items to help generate funds to preserve the rich heritage of agriculture and rural living. Proceeds will benefit the Penn State Ag Alumni Endowment for the Pasto Agricultural Museum."

Items for bid include antique hand tools and furniture, newer and antique model tractors and trucks, a year's supply of Penn State Creamery ice cream, meats from the University Meats Lab, gift certificates for dinner and ornamental grasses. Farm production items include bull semen, one ton of Agway calf feed, farm implement tires, an electric fence charger, alfalfa and corn seed, and a five-year subscription to "Lancaster Farming" newspaper.

Donations for fun and recreation include Penn State football tickets, Nittany Valley Symphony tickets, a full day of fly-fishing for trout on world-famous Spruce Creek in Huntingdon County, a cottage rental on Lake Raystown, and antique and modern golf clubs and bags.

Items that might make good gifts include handmade carvings, photographs and prints, maps, Chinese peonies, muzzleloading shotguns, antique pewter ice cream molds, milk bottles, Penn State sports balls and clothes, and a signed Joe Paterno photo.

Many war books will be auctioned including a 10-volume Civil War set (reserve bid), and several on the Spanish-American War, World Wars I and II and the Korean War. Other books include "Paterno: 324" and "Sources of Strength," an autographed copy of former President Jimmy Carter's book.

Of particular interest to Penn State football fans will be a collection of 20 years worth of Penn State football booster buttons. Auctioned by seasons, these will include the 1982 and 1986 National Championship seasons, the 1993 inaugural Big Ten season, the 1,000th football game button, and the 1994 Big Ten championship season that was capped topped with a win over Oregon in the Rose Bowl. Date, opponent and score are on the reverse side of each button. Additional bags will have other Big Ten and pre-Big Ten seasons.

Auction catalogs are available from the museum office and will be at the site. All auction items will be on display Tuesday and Wednesday in the tent beside the museum. Bidding will close promptly at 4 p.m. on Wednesday. Successful bidders can pick up their items after payment is processed Wednesday afternoon or make arrangements for shipping.

For more information, contact Darwin Braund by phone at (814) 863-1383 or by e-mail at pastoagmuseum@psu.edu.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live animal exhibit area.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days is held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rock Springs, nine miles southwest of State College on Route 45. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday; 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday; and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday. Admission and parking are free.

Scherenschnitte Artists Interpret History

LANDIS VALLEY (Lancaster Co.) — Artisans Claudia, Carroll, and Perry Hopf create a colorful confluence of history and art through their well-known scherenschnitte (paper cuttings) and fancy-grained wood goods.

The Hopfs' work takes center stage for two weeks at The Weathervane, Landis Valley Museum Store, Lancaster, beginning Sunday, August 25, with an opening reception for the artists from noon to 5 p.m. Admission to the museum store, as always, is free. Refreshments will be served.

Claudia and Carroll became deeply involved in their traditional arts while Carroll served first as curator of collections and later as director at Landis Valley Museum, a living history village depicting two centuries of Pennsylvania German rural life. Carroll pursued his fascination with the decorative art of wood graining, using paints to produce natural and fancy grains on picture frames, small chests, boxes, and other wood pieces.

His wife, Claudia, discovered old Pennsylvania German paper cuttings among the Museum's wide-ranging collections and taught numerous museum classes in the art of scherenschnitte. She since has been recognized as one of the artisans responsible for a contemporary resurgence in the popularity of this folk art. She is the author of numerous articles on the ancient technique, which originated in China as early as the seventh century, and has published at least five informational and pattern books on the subject.

Son Perry came into the family's artistic fold at an early age. According to Claudia, she began to show her son how to cut paper when he was only five years old. By the age of 11, he had his own pair of surgical scissors (the essential tool of scherenschnitte), and that, she says, "made him an official part of the business."

Today, Claudia designs, traces, and paints her original scherenschnitte designs. Perry does the cutting. And Carroll does the framing along with all his other wood graining work. The family business, now run from their carefully restored property in Kennebunk, Maine, brings history alive in the most colorful tradition of Pennsylvania German folk art and is in increasing demand throughout the Eastern United States.

Landis Valley Museum is a world-class living history village dedicated to collecting, preserving, and interpreting the history and material culture of the Pennsylvania German community from 1740-1940. Landis Valley Museum is administered by the Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission with active support from the Landis Valley Associates. It is located off Route 272/Oregon Pike, a marked exit off both Route 30 and Route 222. For more information, call Shelby Chunko, (717) 569-9312, or visit www.landisvalleymuseum.org.

Country Decor Mixes Wide Range Of Treasures

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

JACOBUS (York Co.) — For the person who likes a list of do's and don'ts for interior decorating, today's decorating schemes are a bit unsettling.

"If you like it, buy it, and fit it in somewhere," is the often-repeated advice of decorating gurus.

This advice can be both freeing and forbidding. The neat thing about country decorating is that pieces can often be fitted together somewhere or somehow. An unusual piece in an unexpected place is no longer considered taboo. Instead it lends creativity and interest to rooms.

Chests and stools in graduating sizes are often stacked for display in stores and in homes. Claudia Collins said old-fashioned toys such as this horse on wheels fit well into country furnishings.

Old shelves with pegs to hang collectibles are always an asset to country decor.

These handsome hand-forged George Washington andirons is an option to add charm to a fireplace.

Claudia Collins, who specializes in country and painted furniture, said, "Start with pieces you love."

She recommends buying original basic pieces and mixing them with what you have. Then add pieces as you find them and can afford them.

Collins, like many others who haunt auctions and shops for unique pieces, said that her love for country decorating began when she and her husband first married. "We didn't have much money to decorate so we went to auctions."

In recent years Collins said, the buying stage has changed. Fewer bargains are found at auctions because so many dealers frequent them. Today's buyers can often find the same items in shops at more affordable prices.

This is a welcome shift for today's householders whose time is limited. It is much easier and enjoyable for busy people to browse at shops during convenient hours rather than waste a day sitting through an auction waiting for one item to go for bid.

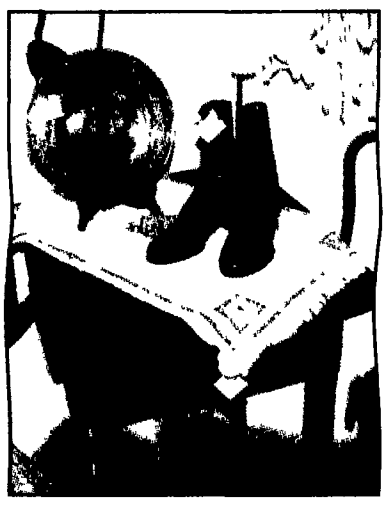
"The wonderful wide range of decorating with country pieces drives us to collect more," Collins said. For this reason she and her husband set up a ooth display booth called Groundhog Hollow Antiques located at Grey Beards Eclectic Emporium. The Collins' display has expanded to five booths. Numerous other dealers located in the same building also specialize in country. But antiques and collectibles are exhibited in all styles and from many eras.

"We try to put things in our booths that we like. But not everyone has the same taste, so we incorporate other pieces as well," Collins said.

Grey Beards is located in a 1903 building, a former furniture store. The antiques complex started out with eight dealers on part of one floor and now has more than 70 dealers and boasts four floors of antiques and collectibles.

Grey Beards is located at 51 Main St., Jacobus. For more information, call (717) 428-9316.

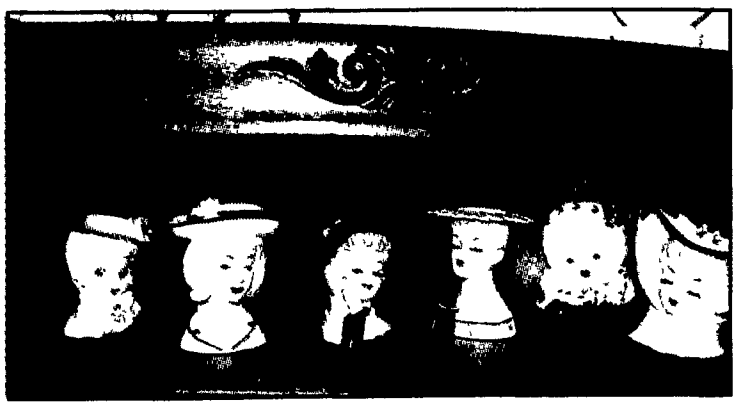
This hand-hooked rug was probably designed to be used on the floor, but placed on the wall alone or with a grouping of antique pictures not only adds an artistic flair but also preserves it from wear.



Use items in unexpected ways when accessorizing a room. An old pair of shoes were meant for wearing when they were made in the 1800s, but today, the shoes make great conversation pieces when placed in view.

An old grain bin can be placed in the kitchen and used for storage or used as an end table or occasional piece in any room of the house. A collection of cabbage slaw tools are more effective when grouped on the wall.

This early plank bottom chair with original paint was devalued when someone cut off the legs. But it makes a great seat for a short adult or a growing child.



Head Vase Collectibles

Head vases, sometimes called pot heads, sold for 99 cents during the 1950s to hold flower arrangements. Today the more intricate styles may sell for hundreds of dollars. Lee Laverty, who owns this collection said prices for the ceramic head vases are based on the way the hand is held and if the figurine is adorned with real jewelry.

Reverse Paintings On Glass Vary In Price, Quality

You can pay as little as $300 or more than $4,000 for a reverse painting on glass. You may have seen them as English pub advertising mirrors, insets in 19th century clocks or framed as art. Among the most charming and expensive are those done in China in the late 18th century. Before thinking you have found a bargain at a country auction, a history lesson is in order.

The technique of painting on glass dates back to Italy, in the 13th century, although crude examples have been dated to the fourth century A.D. In these the picture was engraved on the back of a piece of glass through a layer of gold leaf that had been attached to it. Color was add to the reverse side and a second piece of glass sealed it. By the 17th century, metallic foil was used and reverse painting was being done in Central Europe and Germany's Alsatian and Black forest areas. As the craft developed, each country created its' own style that helps identifying origins.

It was Jean Baptiste Glomy, a French artist-antiques dealer, who created what is known as Verre Eglomise that changed the process. He painted on the underside of glass without using a metallic background. In the late 18th century the black painted silhouettes of statesmen, royalty and famous personages, with black and gold bands painted as borders were popular.

By the 19th century, German immigrants contributed their touch to American reverse painting. Among the subjects were colorful historical figures and beautiful women.

In the mid-nineteenth century reverse glass painting became a do-it-yourself hobby for housewives. Godey's Ladies Magazine offered a complete "Antique Painting on Glass" kit for $5. Not cheap in those days. Included in the package were mezzotint engravings and painting equipment. While the technique wasn't difficult it did require a steady hand.

After the glass was coated with turpentine the paper print, presoaked in water, was placed on the glass, print side down. Gently, it was smoothed with a wet cloth until only the picture outline remained. When dry it was painted by hand.

The art form became popular in all sections of the country.

Remaining examples reflect regional influence. Mount Vernon and seascapes were done in one area. Country scenes and religious subjects in another.

Many reverse glass paintings were used to decorate clocks and mirrors. Others were framed as "pictures."

Chinese portraits of women and scenes of Chinese life were done for export in the 18th century.

CLUES: With the revival of interest in collecting reverse paintings in the 1970s came reproductions. They can be confused with the late Victorian reverse glass paintings that were gaudy and used bits of tinsel and mother-of-pearl in the background. The most common subject for the reproduction was a house, with a small clock dial inset.

Chinese export reverse paintings were also, and still are, being reproduced. Federal clocks and mirrors often had reverse paintings of ships or Mount Vernon in a panel. Since these were broken over the years they were replaced, in the 20th century, with new decal prints. These were overpainted with detailing or by paint-to-order artists.

Before paying too much, judge the quality and the subject matter.

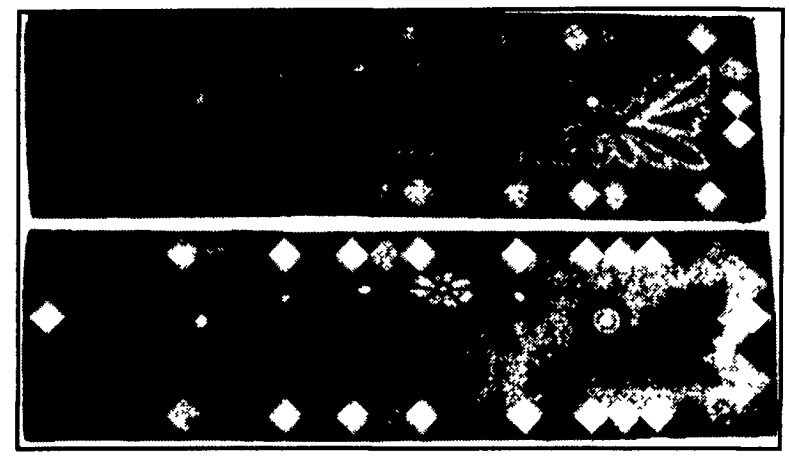
Tibbetts Tiger Maple Highboy To Go To Highest Bidder Aug. 24

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family
Features Editor

YORK (York Co.) — Since 1760 a tiger maple highboy has been passed down through the Tibbetts family, but on August 24, the prized piece will go to the highest bidder.

The handsome highboy is fashioned in the Dunlap School style from New Hampshire, where the original family lived. For the past 50 years, the highboy has been with family descendants in the York area.

John McClain of York Town Auction said that the highboy and many other valued pieces will be auctioned at the York Expo Center Aug. 23-24.



These vibrate-colored rugs were hooked by Ella Garman, Mastersonville, Lancaster County.

Included are two hooked rugs made by Ella Garman of Mastersonville, Lancaster County.

McClain said Garman was an expert rug maker, who used vibrant colors, during the 1920s-1930s. Each rug ready for auction measures 72-inches in length. The designs are bold stylized bird and flower motifs.

This tiger maple highboy dated 1760 will be auctioned Aug. 24.

Agway Bagged Feeds Hires Dealer Relations Manager

SHIPPENSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — To further enhance and develop its dealer relationships, Agway Bagged Feeds has hired Paul S. Mikosky as the manager of dealer relations.

Bob Mulrooney, the marketing and sales manager for Agway Bagged Feeds, said Mikosky's hiring is part of the company's ongoing efforts to strengthen ties to its more than 500 dealers throughout the Northeast and Mid-Atlantic states.

In his new position, Mikosky will manage dealer programs, promotions, and reports, including the recruitment and setting up of new dealers. He will be very much involved in ongoing dealer communications programs and training meetings.

Mikosky, a resident of Jeannette, is a longtime Agway veteran who has worked with Agway stores and dealers for 28 years

Most recently, Mikosky was the vice president of retail operations and membership for Agway, Inc., overseeing corporate locations and independent dealers in the Mid-Atlantic region. He's also served as president of western Pennsylvania's Agway Agricultural Products, in which he was responsible for regional feed mills, agronomy centers, and the sales force.

Binkley & Hurst Offers Planter/Crop Clinic, Open House

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — About 300 people attended a Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. open house Aug. 8, hosted throughout the day on the farm equipment dealer's grounds near Rothsville.

The event featured a presentation on good planting practices from a midwestern ag consultant and displays of new Kinze corn and soybean planters. Guests could also peruse Binkley & Hurst's wide line of other farm equipment.

Nationally know planting expert Ken Ferry talked about two key principles of crop stand uniformity that result from good planting practices. He referred to these as the "photocopy" and "picket fence" principles.

"Every plant should look like a photocopy of the one next to it," Ferry said. He called this the most important goal in crop uniformity.

The other principle refers to even seed distribution, resulting in plant spacing as consistent as a "picket fence."

Included in Ferry's presentation were visits to several "goof plots" on the grounds. According to Don Hoover, Binkley & Hurst salesman, these plots were established to demonstrate the undesirable results of poor planting techniques.

Seedway To Distribute Stine Soybeans

HALL, N.Y. — Seedway and the Stine Seed Company have formed an alliance to facilitate the distribution of Stine S-Brand soybeans by Seedway in its Northeast and Mid-Atlantic farm seed market area.

Seedway President Don Wertman said, "The Seedway-Stine partnership benefits Northeast and Mid-Atlantic soybean producers, bringing outstanding, well-adapted soybean varieties to market that were not previously available."

The addition of Stine soybeans complements a Seedway farm seed product line that includes Seedway, Asgrow, and Dekalb seed corn and soybeans, Seedway alfalfa and specialty forages, grasses and small grains.

Messick's To Feature Apache Mechanical Drive Sprayers At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Messick's Farm Supply, Elizabethtown and Abbottstown, will participate in the 34th Annual Ag Progress Days Aug. 20-22.

Ag Progress Days is sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences. As part of their exhibit, Messick's will offer field demos of the Apache 700 Series every day.

"These sprayers are a lot of machine for the money," Jay Gainer, general manager of Messick's, said. "The Apache is a high-capacity, high-clearance sprayer that features a tight-turning radius. They're economically priced for large acreage."

The Apache 700 and 800 Series, manufactured by Equipment Technologies Inc. (E.T.), offers growers dependable performance. A medium-sized mechanical drive post-emergence sprayer, the Apache 700 features a 750-gallon tank, 170-hp power shift transmission, enhanced visibility, smooth-riding suspension, and large tires that keep soil compaction at a minimum.

The Apache Plus 800 features a high-capacity 850-gallon tank to provide even better productivity.

Apache's big advantage over hydrostatically driven sprayers is its proven mechanical drive. The simple but very rugged design gives the owner a dependable sprayer with low maintenance costs. No more wheel motor problems, the patented hydraulic suspension system gives these sprayers the smoothest ride in the industry.

Messick's dealership officially opened in 1953 when two Messick brothers broke ground and erected a building along Rt. 230 in Lancaster County. Since then, the company has grown to two locations, more than 43,000 square feet of showroom/service/storage space, and more than 65 committed employees. Currently operated by Bob and Ken Messick, the company carries a full line of agricultural and construction equipment.

Case IH Beefs Up MX Series Magnum™ Line

RACINE, Wis. — Upgrades involving power, fuel efficiency, drive train and operator environment top the list of improvements announced for new Case IH MX Series Magnum row crop tractors

"We've taken the proven performance of the Case IH MX Series Magnum to the next level," said Stacey Smith, marketing and training manager for over 100 hp tractors. "Using input gathered from our customers, we have created the next generation of tractors to the lead the row-crop market."

The new MX210, MX230, MX255 and MX285 offer 170, 190, 215 and 240 PTO horsepower (hp), respectively — as much as 10 additional hp over previous models. And, the added power does not come at the expense of added fuel consumption

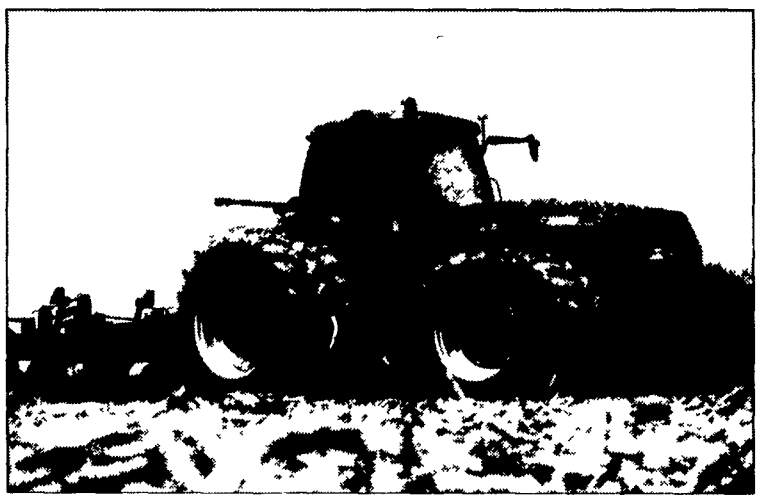
"Our updated iso-mounted engines continue to deliver 46 percent torque rise at 2,000 rpm, which results in reduced fuel consumption and longer engine life," Smith said. "We see our customers using larger implements with higher horsepower and hydraulic requirements, but they continue to stay focused on fuel economy and efficiency."

An electronic fuel system on the MX255 and MX285 further improves the efficiency of fuel usage. The system continuously monitors engine performance and adapts to ensure peak efficiency.

Another electronic feature — auto shift — provides automatic control of forward gear selection, allowing the operator to maintain speed without shifting. In transport, the auto road operation function provides constant speed control.

"In the field, auto field operation automatically upshifts and downshifts to respond to varying load conditions, while maintaining engine speed," Smith points out. "Farmers we've talked with say they appreciate this feature most in tillage applications, where the tractor's load can be constantly changing. The system saves effort and optimizes performance."

Other changes to the 18-speed, full powershift transmission include adding extra friction plates and increasing clutch pressure for smoother shifting regardless of the load.



The 8.3-liter engines in Case IH MX Series Magnum tractors deliver a 46 percent torque rise at 2,000 rpm for reduced fuel consumption and longer engine life. In tough applications like deep tillage, the MX285 shown here with a Case IH 2500 ecolo-till ripper will deliver up to 31 PTO hp power growth.

Asgrow Introduces Five New Corn Hybrids

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Brand new for 2003, Asgrow has introduced five new hybrids to enhance grower profitability.

"Asgrow's continuous advancements provide corn hybrids with stronger disease resistance, superior field agronomics and higher yield potential," said Dale Sorensen, corn technical manager for Asgrow. "Asgrow's innovative breeding, cutting-edge research and industry-leading germplasm have positioned it as a leader in corn technology."

The newest Asgrow® hybrids feature innovations such as Residue Proven™ for minimum tillage operations, Monsanto's YieldGard® Corn Borer trait for season-long insect protection and the Roundup Ready® trait for better weed control.

Asgrow and Monsanto researchers working on genetic traits cooperate closely with corn breeders working on the latest germplasm. The focus, Sorensen explains, is to develop hybrids specially suited to individual geographies.

"Asgrow incorporates wide genetic diversity into its hybrids to optimize their yield potential and reduce production risk in any geography," Sorensen said. "We have significant genetic diversity among our corn hybrids, and successfully use germplasm from other parts of the world to help U.S. growers improve yields and profits."

Farm Credit Groups Salute Congressman Tim Holden

OLEY (Berks Co.) — Over 100 farmers, politicians and community leaders joined area Farm Credit organizations on June 29 to salute Congressman Tim Holden, and to thank him for his support of agriculture. Congressman Holden is currently the ranking member on the House Ag Subcommittee on Conservation, Credit, Rural Development and Research.

"I'm very flattered to be honored by you all today," said Holden, speaking to the crowd gathered at the farm of Rodger Wagner of Oley. "As most of you know, I have been a member of the Ag Committee since first elected in 1992. I'm lucky to have been mentored by several outstanding members of the farming community, some of whom are here today. I know the importance of the family farm, and I'm committed to making sure that it can thrive both today and in the future."

"Congressman Holden has been a big supporter of Farm Credit, and we certainly appreciate that," said Bob Frazee, president and CEO of MidAtlantic Farm Credit. "It's important for members of Congress to recognize that farming is a capital-intensive proposition, and to create legislation that supports its continuance."

The event was sponsored by MidAtlantic Farm Credit, AgChoice Farm Credit, AgFirst Farm Credit and Farm Credit Council.

Agronomy Electronic Newsletter Valuable To Farmers

BUCYRUS, Ohio — Ohio farmers and agri-businesses saved over $11.2 million last year in reduced pesticide and herbicide costs and increased crop production with the help of C.O.R.N.

C.O.R.N. (Crop Observation and Recommendation Network) is a weekly electronic newsletter produced by the Ohio State University Extension Agronomy Team that provides timely, useful tips on insect and disease management, crop production, pesticide/herbicide recommendations, research results and program/workshop information.

Team members conducted a survey in 2001 to determine the overall economic impact C.O.R.N. has on its readers. Survey results indicated that users saved over $1 million in reduced chemical costs of corn and soybeans and increased their yields of the crops by 3.5 million bushels. The estimated value from the increased production totaled over $10.1 million using the 1996 Farm Bill government loan rates. The survey represented 2.57 million acres of corn, soybeans, wheat and alfalfa — 30 percent of Ohio's crop acreage.

"We feel very good about the survey results. I think we've built a body of evidence indicating that C.O.R.N. is a very good piece of information," said Steve Prochaska, an Ohio State Extension Crawford County agent and a C.O.R.N. editor. "The whole idea behind C.O.R.N. is to provide real-time, problem solving tips and to do so in a multi-disciplinary team effort. I think that's the key to why it's so successful."

Ohio State Extension specialists and researchers within the College of Food, Agricultural, and Environmental Sciences make up the team that creates the newsletter each week. Disciplines include plant pathology, entomology, crop production, weed science and IPM (Integrated Pest Management). C.O.R.N. is released every Tuesday via e-mail, fax and on the Internet at http://corn.osu.edu/. Over 800 individuals are currently subscribed to the newsletter's listserv.

Not only is C.O.R.N. helpful for its readers, but the newsletter is an invaluable tool for those Ohio State researchers and extension agents who contribute to it each week.

"C.O.R.N. has been a great help in getting timely information out to the growers. Before C.O.R.N., we sent newsletters out by mail. By the time the growers got the written information by mail the problem was over or too late to do anything about," said Pat Lipps, an Ohio State plant pathologist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center who posts information on a regular basis. "I think the C.O.R.N. newsletter has been one of the best things we have ever done in Field Crop Extension for Ohio's producers. Any producer or ag dealer not getting C.O.R.N. is not adequately informed and is likely losing money because of it."

C.O.R.N. has been available to growers and agri-businesses for six years. Free e-mail subscription of the newsletter can be obtained by sending an e-mail message to corn-out-on@postoffice.ag.ohio-state.edu.

Seaphire International Obtains Exclusive License To Salinity Tolerant Plant Technology

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Seaphire International, a privately held agricultural biotechnology company focused on improving the efficiency and environmental suitability of plants, announced the acquisition of an exclusive worldwide license to technology that has successfully created salt-tolerant plants.

The technology was licensed from the University of Toronto Innovations Foundation and was invented by a team at the University of Toronto under the leadership of Professor Eduardo Blumwald, PhD.

"Salt tolerance technology is one of the cornerstones of our strategy to develop environmentally sustainable plant varieties," said Roy Hodges, president and CEO of Seaphire. "The results achieved by Dr. Blumwald's team are remarkable. We have established an aggressive program to develop and commercialize this technology."

Salinity is one of the most significant problems facing world agriculture. Salinization of agricultural land is primarily the result of irrigation, as water evaporates and leaves behind salt residue in the soil. It is estimated that worldwide nearly 200 million acres of agricultural land — more than the area of Texas — are impacted by salinity, and nearly 12 million acres are added annually to this total.

In addition to farmland that has been forced out of production, more than 750 million acres of other salinity impacted land in the world could be brought into agricultural production if salinity tolerant plants were available.

Blumwald's research team has developed tomato and canola plants that grow and produce normal fruit and seed yields when irrigated with water that is 33 percent the salinity level of seawater. Most agricultural crops fail to achieve economic yields when salinity exceeds about eight percent of seawater. The research has been described in several scientific publications, including Science, Nature Biotechnology, and Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, USA. The resulting proprietary technology, which is now licensed exclusively to Seaphire, is based on the introduction of a natural plant gene that neutralizes the impact of salt.

George Adams, president of The University of Toronto Innovations Foundation, the technology-licensing unit of the University of Toronto, said "With its resources and focus, Seaphire is the ideal company to further develop and commercialize this technology. We believe that salinity in agriculture is a global issue that this technology will effectively address."

Seaphire International, based in Phoenix, Ariz., is an agricultural biotechnology company that develops and commercializes sustainable technologies for agriculture and aquaculture that improve the human condition and provide environmental and economic efficiencies. Seaphire is a wholly owned subsidiary of Exeter Life Sciences, Inc., a multidisciplinary company with operating units addressing market opportunities in human, animal, and plant health. NC+ Combines Best Genetics With Newest Technology

LINCOLN, Neb. — Continuing the philosophy of offering customers a wide variety of options, NC+ is introducing 35 new seed products for 2003.

"As an independent company, we have the ability to select the very best genetics from both the public sector and our own in-house breeding program. We combine those with the best technologies being offered in the marketplace," NC+ President Larry Schuett said. "For example, we have three new Roundup Ready®/YieldGard® Corn Borer stacked-gene corn hybrids for 2003. Those are the kinds of choices we offer that not every company is able to. Ultimately it gives our customers more options when making cropping decisions."

In addition, NC+ has five new YieldGard Corn Borer, four new Roundup Ready, one new Clearfield®, and one new Liberty Link® corn hybrid for 2003.

"While the technology products are a very important part of the new corn lineup, we also understand how important it is to continue to offer improved genetics in our conventional hybrids." Schuett said. "Through our extensive corn breeding and testing program, we have been able to improve such genetic traits as yield potential, drought tolerance and gray leaf spot resistance."

NC+ has seven new conventional hybrids for 2003. They include maturities of 98, 100, 103, 106, 107, 109 and 112 days. There is one new white corn hybrid available as well.

"We have a long-standing reputation for being one of the very best grain sorghum and forage sorghum seed companies in the United States," Schuett said. "Our sorghum breeders have lived up to that reputation again this year by developing five new hybrids that offer genetic packages that will greatly benefit our customers."

NC+ also has six new Roundup Ready and two new conventional soybean varieties for 2003. Maturities include Early Group II, Mid Group II, Late Group II and Late Group III.

Everlast makes metal roofs and sides that are substantially stronger than it's competition. Everlast II does not buckle as easy during erection, less popping and buckling while walking on it. Higher wind and snow loads. More attractive.

Cost-efficient Centurydrain® roofing and siding is on some of the best looking buildings in the country.

Build with Centurydrain roofing and siding and you've built a money-wise structure. Full-hard, high tensile galvanized steel, and an exclusive drain channel for a dry interior give you a building that'll handle years of hard duty and hard weather. Good looking, too. Crisp lines and plenty of bright, long-lasting colors make Wheeling Centurydrain as handsome as it is economical.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased.

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

STANDING ALONE IN THEIR FIELD

Great Plains Precision Seeding Systems, available in 15', 20' and 30' widths, are the ideal tool for planting corn, soybeans and small grains Great Plains drills are also ideal for planting twin row 30" corn In field trials nationwide, agronomists estimate that twin row 30" corn is providing substantially higher yields than traditional 30" corn

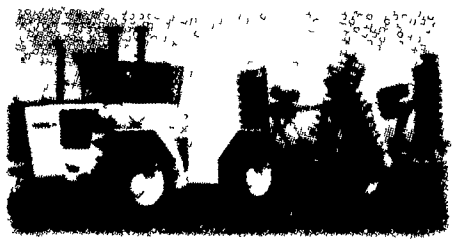
Krause Rockflex Discs...
Part of the Ag Progress Days Tradition

Krause engineered the first "Rockflex" disc in 1965. Improvements in materials and design over the past 37 years have produced the best disc for rocks available today. The 7300 and 7400 discs are in a class by themselves when it comes to getting the job done in tough eastern conditions.

KRAUSE



- Rugged, Dependable Performance
- Excellent Penetration in Tough Conditions
- Level Job Every Time
- More Timely Planting
- Higher Resale Value When it's Time to Trade

Researchers Win Awards

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dennis Murphy, distinguished professor of agricultural engineering and Nancy Ellen Kiernan, program evaluation specialist, both in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, were recently honored by the National Institute for Farm Safety for "exemplary contributions to agricultural safety and health."

At its recent annual conference, the institute recognized Murphy, Kiernan and three other researchers for their study of 216 small farms in Pennsylvania comparing the efficacy of safety education alone versus education plus hazard self-audits.

"This study is a good example of how many field educational intervention programs could and should be evaluated," a release from the institute states. "Their results showed a significant decrease in hazards identified and addressed when the owner/operator was actively engaged via the self-audit. Notable from the standpoints of evaluation design and execution, was questionnaire-based self-report measures coupled with independent hazard inspections to verify self-reports."

The NIFS is the largest professional development organization in North America solely dedicated to the professional improvement of agricultural safety and health leaders. To recognize outstanding contributions, the institute expanded its awards program in farm safety, consisting of research awards and prevention awards.

A Message from the Secretary of Agriculture

Commonwealth of Pennsylvania

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY

SAMUEL E. HAYES, JR.

Dear Aggies:

When I became Secretary of Agriculture, my goals included the construction of new facilities for agriculture. We have completed the construction and upgrade of our Greenhouse Complex at the Department of Agriculture. We are in the midst of an upgrade and new construction at PDA's Farm Show Complex. And, we have entered the construction phase of the new Livestock Evaluation Center which is operated by the PA Department of Agriculture.

This all adds up to over $92 million of new construction and improvements for facilities operated by the PA Department of Agriculture on behalf of Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry. These are historic initiatives.

As the Secretary of Agriculture, I greatly appreciate the support of our governor, state lawmakers, and aggie stakeholders. Thank you very much for helping to make it possible for the PA Department of Agriculture to build for the future.

Wiant Named Chair

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Harry V. Wiant Jr. has been named the first recipient of the newly endowed Joseph E. Ibberson Chair in forest resources management in the School of Forest Resources.

Wiant has been professor of forestry for 24 years at West Virginia University, where he received a bachelor's degree in forest management. He earned a master's degree in silviculture from the University of Georgia and a doctorate in forest ecology from Yale University.

The chair's purpose is to educate students and to continue leadership in the professional management of private forest resources. Charles Strauss, director of the School of Forest Resources, notes that Wiant is a recent past president of the Society of American Foresters and expects him to "carry the emblem of professional forestry at Penn State."

"Harry has a tremendous depth of experience in forestry education, from the redwood region of northern California to the pineywoods of east Texas and the hardwoods forests of Appalachia, as well as in the tropical forests of Honduras and Eucalyptus forests of Australia. His research, published in more than 200 professional publications, deals mostly with forest ecology and timber inventory," said Stauss.

APD's Natural Resource Conservation Area Has It All

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — From nutrient management, rainfall simulators targeting runoff, forested buffers, conservation practices, and grazing management to snakes, backyard composting, fly-casting and tatoos, the Natural Resource Conservation Partnership Area of Penn State's Ag Progress Days has something for everyone.

The event, sponsored by Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences Aug. 20-22, will be conducted at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45.

Encompassing almost five acres of the 200-acre Ag Progress Days site, the Conservation Partnership area is full of demonstrations, presentations, tours, and exhibits. More than 15 federal, state, and local agencies and private entities will be represented.

Tours will include a forestry tour that leads you on an easy walking trail through parts of "Penn's Woods." The conservation tour will take you to grassy waterways, stream crossings, diversions, and terraces. A grazing tour will present facts on grazing assistance programs for producers, native warm-season grasses for biofuels and carbon sequestration, and wildlife.

This year a tour will be offered on forested riparian buffers to see a tree planting done at the Ag Progress Days site. Visitors will learn what forested riparian buffers can do for a stream and why they are important.

The presentation tent will feature a grazing forum where farmers can hear a panel of their peers discuss what's working on their farms and what isn't, as well as a presentation on phosphorous nutrient management.

Representatives from the state's Conservation Commission, Department of Agriculture and Natural Resources Conservation Service, will be available to answer questions. The dirt and gravel road program, which is reducing sediment in streams as well as making neighborhoods cleaner, and a one-day presentation featuring the "Snakes of Pennsylvania" will round out the programs.

The main exhibition tent will feature displays for kids and adults from federal, state and local agencies and private organizations. The Pennsylvania Fish and Boat Commission will have a fish tank and will offer fly-casting exhibitions once each day.

Interactive exhibits will include invertebrates, worm containers, touch boxes and stick-on tattoos. Conservation professionals will be on hand to discuss

Other exhibits will focus on composting, nutrient management, best-management practices, forestry, fencing and watershed conservation.

Looking like an outdoor shower, a rainfall simulator will demonstrate the benefits of analyzing field and pasture runoff. The rainfall simulator will run at 10 a.m., 11:30 a.m., and 1 p.m. each day. Other times may be offered. Additional demonstration areas will show conservation practices on the ground.

Several grass plantings will show how native plantings can improve soil health and water conservation efforts. National Plant Material Center experts will be on hand to discuss the best planting for particular soil types. Livestock watering equipment, fencing types and no-till planting also will be demonstrated. Visitors also can spend some time relaxing in the backyard garden, courtesy of Blackhawk Nursery.

Stop by the information booth on the main grounds or at the Natural Resource Conservation Partnership for times and details of the tours and presentations. Exhibits and demonstrations are ongoing.

For more information, contact Stacy Mitchell of the USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service at (717) 237-2208.

Hours for Ag Progress Days are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Tuesday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday, and 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Thursday. Admission and parking are free.

Museum Features Early Pork Preservation At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Before the advent of power equipment and electrical refrigeration, processing meat and keeping it fresh were trickier propositions.

At Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22, you can learn more about how these things were accomplished in bygone eras by visiting the Pasto Agricultural Museum's special exhibit, "Early Farm and Home Pork Processing and Preservation."

According to museum curator Darwin Braund, in the past nearly every farm family produced and processed all the meat consumed during the entire year. "This exhibit covers the days before electricity and refrigeration, thus the rudimentary nature of the tools and processes," he said.

The exhibit is supported by the Professor P. Thomas Ziegler Endowment for the Pasto Agricultural Museum. The museum's existing collection of previously donated early farm and home pork processing and preservation items have been combined with others purchased with the Ziegler Endowment gift for the Ag Progress Days exhibition.

"One of the interesting aspects of the exhibit are the first-person recollections of early meat processing work at Penn State, handwritten by Professor Ziegler," Braund said. "He wrote numerous practical and scientific articles for popular and technical journals. His best-known publication was the book, 'The Meat We Eat,' first published in 1943. It became the first college meat processing textbook. Original copies of publications from 1936, 1949, 1952, and 1959 are displayed. Copy number one of the first edition of this text is shown through the courtesy of his widow, Jean Ziegler."

The Pasto Agricultural Museum collection has more than 850 antique implements used for farming and rural life. Visitors can tour the museum during Ag Progress Days and by appointment. Groups of 10 or more can schedule tours from April 15 through Oct. 15 by calling (814) 863-1383, sending an e-mail to pastoagmuseum@psu.edu, or registering through the World Wide Web at pasto.cas.psu.edu.

Going To Ag Progress Days? Go For A Walk In The Woods

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — If you have been to Ag Progress Days, you have undoubtedly enjoyed the numerous exhibits, events, displays, and food. But have you ever visited the demonstration woodlot?

If not consider taking a guided tour through the cool, shady woods.

The Forest Stewardship tour at Ag Progress Days features examples of forest and wildlife management practices that can enhance the economic and ecologic potential of woodlands. Visitors can pose questions to guides from the Pennsylvania Bureau of Forestry, Pennsylvania Game Commission, and the Penn State School of Forest Resources.

This year's Ag Progress Days will take place on Aug. 20-22, at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45. Buses for the forest stewardship tour will depart from the National Resource Conservation Partnership tent at 10 a.m., noon, 2 p.m., and 4 p.m. each day. After a short bus ride, visitors will take a one-hour walking tour in the 30-acre demonstration woodlot.

This year's forest stewardship tour will start with a visit to an area where some trees were recently cut. The goal of the cutting is to enhance timber quality and wildlife habitat. During last year's tours, the guides asked visitors to vote for how they would manage this area. A majority of visitors voted for an improvement thinning, and now you can see the results for yourself.

After the thinning, the tour will visit an area where tree growth has been tracked since 1983. The trees are tall, reaching nearly 100 feet into the sky. The tour group will spend some time in this cool, shady forest considering its many values, including income, wildlife, and natural beauty. We'll talk about the age of the forest and discover some interesting facts about how trees grow and how this area of the woodlot likely originated from farms abandoned many years ago.

Forests are an important part of Pennsylvania. We all enjoy the green hills, the cool streams, and the abundant wildlife healthy forests provide. There is always something to learn in the woods. So, whether you are a woodland owner or just appreciate forests and trees, take a break from the hustle and bustle of Ag Progress Days and join a tour in the woods.

Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences sponsors Ag Progress Days, one of the largest outdoor agricultural events in the east. Admission, shuttle service, and parking are free. No charge or tickets are required for the Forest Stewardship tour.

For more information about the Forest Stewardship tour, contact Penn State's Forest Resources Extension Office at (800) 235-WISE. For more information about Ag Progress Days, call (800) PSU-1010 (through Aug. 22) or visit the Website: http://apd.cas.psu.edu/.

Good Fence —Good Neighbors

Sylvan Yoder and his sons Mahlon, Andy and Elmer, and several part-time and full-time employees round out a professional crew of fence installers.

Mike Goss at Farm Credit in Yeagertown has worked with Beaver Fence and their customers to arrange financing for fence projects and would be happy to arrange financing for you.

The proper equipment makes installing a fence on steep banks possible. A handshake between Sylvan and a satisfied customer complete the job.

Good Fences – Good Neighbors

Fifteen years of fencing experience and family commitment make an excellent mix for quality fence installation.

Specializing in farm and game fencing, the Sylvan Yoder family spend most of their time stretching high tensile wire through fields and forests. They also install box wire fencing as well as split rail and board fencing.

Box wire fencing is very popular for goats and sheep. It's almost like putting your animals in the barn and shutting the gate. High tensile wire is used by dairy farmers.

Beaver Fence will go about anywhere if the job is big enough, 5000 feet or more of fence will allow for a job any place in the Commonwealth.

A large inventory of post and wire along with good equipment get the jobs done easily and efficiently. A tractor trailer brings the supplies to the work site. All terrain "mules" hold the rolls of wire, drills, chain saws and other tools.

Experience, inventory, and equipment gives Beaver Fence the edge for good prices. A recent customer compared the costs for materials and setting his own fence to discover that for his job $1000 covered all the costs for a professional to install his fence properly, quickly and without using his "back" to set the posts.

Sylvan operates the post-driving attachment.

Crop Producers Must Update Base Records

Letter Asks for Updated Information on Planted Acres

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Commodity producers have until Aug. 31 to verify and update records on planted and prevented planted acres filed with the Farm Service Agency (FSA), according to Richard Pallman, Pennsylvania FSA executive director. Non-participating producers who do not have an existing Production Flexibility Contract (PFC) contract with FSA also have until Aug. 31 to report acreage and provide verifiable documentation of prior year plantings if they want to participate in all farm programs for the 2002 through 2007 crop years.

"Reviewing, verifying and updating bases and yields may be the most important thing we ask producers to do this year", said Alarie Fleming, program section chief of the FSA state office. "The information we have on file must be correct in order for producers to receive accurate direct and counter-cyclical payments in the future."

To assist, FSA is sending letters to producers across the country asking for their updates. The letter includes a summary acreage history report showing 2002 PFC crops and contract acreage along with acreage history by crop for each of the years 1998 through 2001 for covered commodities. Included are planted acres and/or acres prevented from being planted for 1998 through 2001.

If the information in the letter is correct, and changes are not necessary, the producer does nothing. If the information is not correct a producer should visit the local FSA offices before the August 31 deadline and provide verifiable documentation of planted and/or prevented planted acreage and yields. Verifiable documentation may include seed receipts, production records and crop insurance records.

The 2002 Farm Bill provides for direct and counter-cyclical payments to be made to eligible producers of covered commodity crops for the 2002 through 2007 crops. Covered commodities include wheat, corn, sorghum, barley, oats, upland cotton, rice, soybeans, sunflower seeds, canola, flaxseed, mustard, safflower, and rapeseed.

For further information, contact the FSA office in one of the fifty USDA Service Centers serving Pennsylvania producers. Offices are listed in the U.S. Government section of the Blue Pages in the telephone directory under Agriculture, or visit FSA on the World Web Web at http://www.fsa.usda.gov.

Information about 2002 Farm Bill issues is available at http://www.usda.gov/farmbill.

Francl Named Head Of Penn State Plant Pathology

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Leonard Francl, professor of plant pathology at North Dakota State University, has been named head of the plant pathology department in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, effective Aug. 26.

Francl joined North Dakota State University as an assistant professor in 1990, rising to the rank of full professor in 2001. His research has focused on plant disease epidemiology, disease forecasting, nematology and diseases of wheat, including tan spot, Stagonospora leaf blotch and Fusarium head blight.

"Dr. Francl's national experience and leadership in the epidemiology of serious plant diseases brings an important strength to the department and college that complements our programs serving the commonwealth," said Robert Steele, dean of the college. "We are delighted to have him join our leadership team."

Francl developed and implemented the NDSU Small Grains Disease Forecasting System for growers in North Dakota and Minnesota. In addition, he has studied plant diseases and consulted on research projects in Pakistan, Uruguay, and Mexico.

Previously, as a plant pathologist with USDA in Beltsville, Md., he studied population dynamics of the soybean cyst nematode. He also served as a postdoctoral researcher in plant pathology at The Ohio State University, as a research associate in the plant pathology department at the University of Missouri, and as an instructor and assistant professor in the agriculture department at Southeast Missouri State University.

Francl has taught several undergraduate and graduate courses in plant pathology and has advised numerous master's and doctoral degree candidates.

He has authored or co-authored more than 45 articles in refereed scientific journals, served as senior or associate editor for three scientific journals, written eight book chapters and edited two books. He has been active in several professional associations, including the American Phytopathological Society, the American Society of Agronomy, the International and Canadian Societies of Plant Pathology, the Crop Science Society and the Society of Nematologists.

He received his bachelor's degree in agronomy and his master's degree in plant sciences, both from the University of Arizona, and earned his doctorate in plant pathology at the University of Missouri.

Penn State's plant pathology department conducts research, undergraduate and graduate education and cooperative extension programs in plant and mushroom health science with emphases on the control of plant diseases and understanding the relationships between plants, microbes, abiotic stressors and the environment.

The department has made discoveries leading to major reductions in the use of pesticides on crops through its leadership in integrated pest management, by developing disease prediction models and expert systems and by improving genetic resistance to disease by traditional and modern methods.

Penn State Field Diagnostic Clinic Sept. 4-5

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — The 2002 Penn State Agronomic Field Diagnostic Clinic is scheduled here at the Agronomy Research Farm Sept. 4-5, from 9 a.m.-4 p.m.

These one-day field clinics are designed to improve the agronomic management skills of industry personnel, extension and public agents, crop consultants, and producers. Specialists from Penn State and the agricultural community will provide hands-on diagnosis training in crop production, pest management, soil fertility, and soil and water conservation. Participants choose from a variety of topics and have ample opportunity to diagnose, solve, and discuss crop management problems and situations. In addition to gaining practical agronomic knowledge, CCA and pesticide applicator license credits can be obtained.

This year's clinic will be similar to past programs but will be held later in the season to demonstrate certain topics that are evident in cropping systems during that time of year. It will focus on various topics relating to crop and soil management. As in the past, there will be time for discussion and hands-on participation. The program is designed to allow participants to attend all of the sessions and will include:

• Assessing the potential for corn disease problems. A host of fungi and bacteria threaten to limit the productivity of the Pennsylvania corn crop each year. The early detection of disease can help to identify a potential problem in the making, and help producers establish harvest priorities. This session will address the identification and management of corn diseases that often complicate the harvesting, marketing, and feeding of corn and corn products.

Certified Crop Adviser CEUs: 1.0 PM

Instructor: Dr. Erick DeWolf

• Soil compaction: packing not lacking. With the increasing trend of larger equipment being used by farmers and custom applicators, the potential for soil compaction is a concern and the magnitude of this problem can be difficult to determine. During this session, participants will be able to measure and calculate soil pressures of farm machinery and the affect of tire pressure. Also, participants will learn how to verify soil compaction with a penetrometer and how to determine if subsoiling would be beneficial.

Certified Crop Adviser CEUs: 1.0 SW

Instructor: Dr. Sjoerd Duiker

• Issues in field crop insect management: 2002-2003. Every year the types and magnitudes of insect problems change and questions arise about how these pests impacted the crop and what can be done for next year. Therefore, this year Penn State will select a few key topics for discussion that are focused on current insect problems. These topics will be selected based on injury symptoms that are visible. Likely topics will be: Advances in Our Understanding of Soybean Aphid Biology and Management, Cereal Rust Mite Biology and Management, Transgenic Technology for Corn Rootworm and Black Cutworm Management, and/or Economic Assessment of Bt Technology for European Corn Borer Control.

Senate Passes Legislation

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Cattle producers scored a major victory late this afternoon when the Senate passed by 64-34 a bill that included Trade Promotion Authority (TPA).

The conference report on H.R. 3009, the Andean Trade Preferences Act, also included Trade Adjustment Assistance and Generalized System of Preferences.

The bill will now move to the President's desk for signature. He is expected to sign.

"This is an exciting day for cattle producers and for the future of international beef trade," said Chuck Lambert, chief economist for the National Cattlemen's Beef Association (NCBA). "We have worked many long hours for this outcome. Increased international trade is imperative in these market conditions. We made it our priority to educate members of Congress on the dire need for Trade Promotion Authority, and it looks like they have heard and understood our pleas."

"For the past eight years, we have not had the ability to advance our international trade capacity and U.S. beef trade surpluses have declined," said Lambert. "Today's poor market conditions reflect this. There is a huge opportunity to increase demand for U.S. beef internationally, and as international demand for beef products rise, the prices paid to cattlemen will increase."

Since the lapse of TPA in 1994, the U.S. beef industry has been sidelined while other countries have brokered trade deals. While we have been delaying, other countries have been negotiating better access for their exports according to Bush Administration officials.

• Nodulation and nitrogen fixation. The process of inoculation and nitrogen fixation in legumes saves Pennsylvania farmers nearly $40 million each year in nitrogen fertilization and protein costs. How does this mystical process occur and how can we manage to maximize its impact?

Certified Crop Adviser CEUs: 1.0 CP

Instructor: Dr. Marvin Hall

• Soil sampling: the weakest link. Soil sampling has been well established as a useful tool for managing nutrients. The weakest link in soil testing accuracy is collecting a representative sample. Strategies for determining what we want the sample to represent and then how to actually collect the sample to meet that goal will be covered. Both traditional and new high-tech methods to achieve this elusive goal will be featured.

NCGA Calls For USDA Drought Task Force

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Because of the serious impact of the continuing drought on crop and livestock producers, Tim Hume, president of the National Corn Growers Association (NCGA), has sent a letter to Secretary of Agriculture Ann Veneman urging the USDA to immediately form a task force to conduct a comprehensive evaluation of the losses caused by drought conditions over the last two years.

Damages caused by the widespread, prolonged drought include substantial reductions in crop yields, forced liquidation of cattle herds, increases in crop pests and diseases, critically low water supplies, and decimated forage.

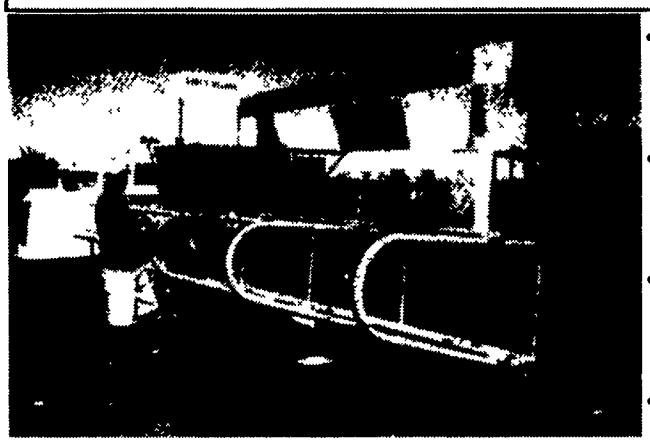
Building New or Remodeling?
NEW CLUSTER FREE STALLS



- Suspended from the barn rafters by free swinging chains to avoid cow entanglement.
- Free swinging feature eliminates injury to cows and also any damage to the stalls
- Decreases the occurrence of cow bruises enhancing milk production capabilities.
- Powder coated with 20 year rust thru guarantee.

- Fully adjustable neck rail.
- Fully adjustable brisket rail.
- Available up to a 4 bed cluster
- Patented.

Cluster Free Stalls are easily installed in new or remodeled barns. The free stalls "hanging" from barn rafters provide many advantages to help keep cows safe and healthy. By using suspended free stalls, cows are less likely to obtain bruises. Thus all their energy can be concentrated towards increased milk production. The design of the stall allows it to swing up, down or back out of the way of the cow. Because they swing freely, the stalls can withstand the force of animal contact. And because they are powder coated, they require little maintenance.

Pa. State Grange Reviews Newly Passed State Budget

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — It was down to the wire, but the General Assembly passed the 2002-2003 budget for the commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

With the ink barely dry from the pen of Gov. Mark Schweiker, members of the Pennsylvania State Grange examined the new budget's impact on the agricultural industry.

"In comparison to other areas, the agricultural community fared well," William A. Steel, master/president of the Pennsylvania State Grange, said after examining the newly passed budget.

"For the first time in over a decade, the state faced a severe shortfall in revenues. For that reason, some tough fiscal decisions had to be made. In the end, the Department of Agriculture found itself with over a five percent decrease in appropriations in comparison to last year's budget."

According to Brenda Shambaugh, legislative director for the Pennsylvania State Grange, the Department of Environmental Protection was a victim of this year's budget.

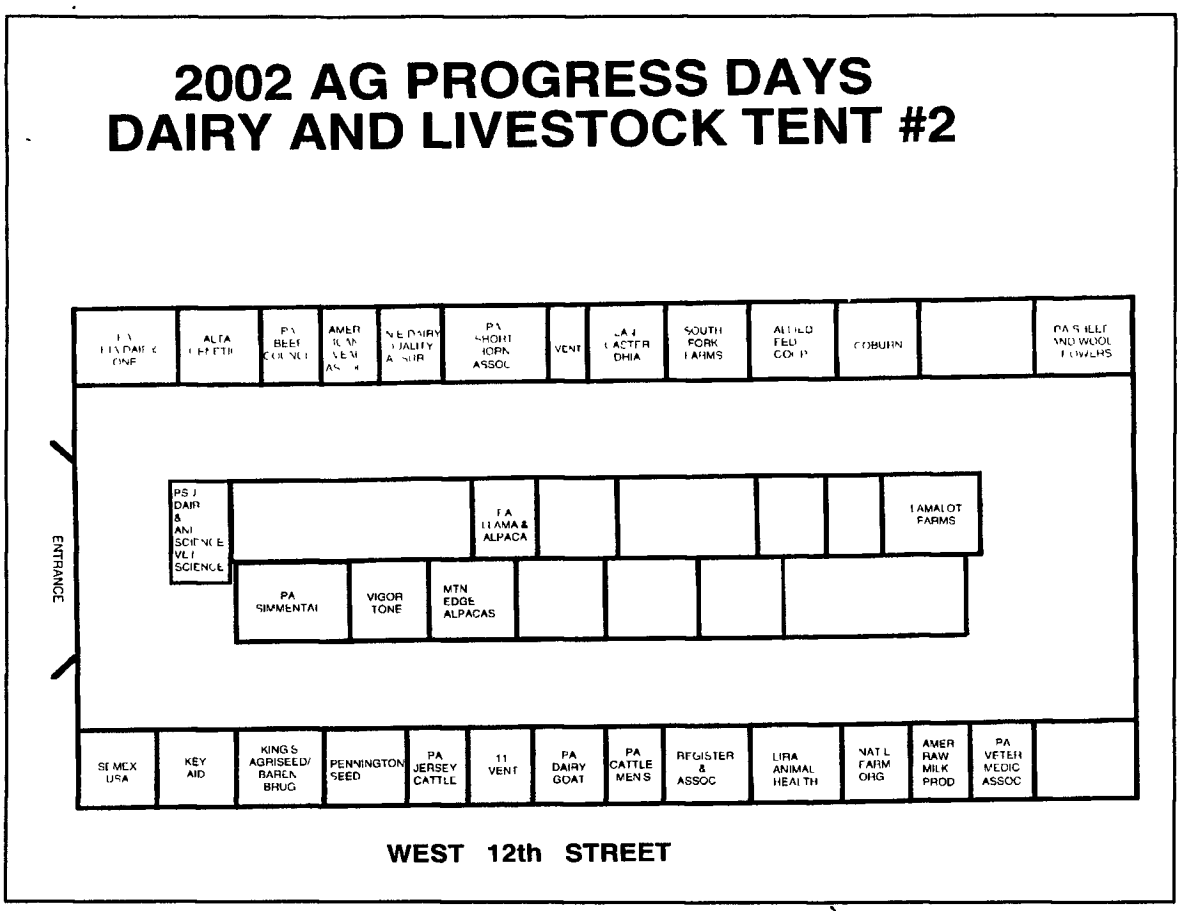
"DEP had 31.1 percent of their budget slashed," Shambaugh said. "Most of the cut was attributed to the removal of general fund dollars in the amount of $100 million earmarked for environmental programs by the Growing Greener Initiatives."

Shambaugh pointed out that the restoration of $2.268 million for agricultural extension and research at Penn State University is a plus for the agricultural industry. However, funding for agricultural research and extension falls short by .07 percent of last year's funds.

"Given the current economy and the state's large deficits, things could have been significantly worse," Shambaugh said. "As a matter of fact, the state had to spend nearly three-quarters of the Rainy Day Fund, or taxpayer reserves, to balance the $20.7 billion spending plan. Even with the four percent cut in spending, to balance the recession year plan required tripling the cigarette tax and a $4 a ton increase in solid waste tipping fees. Those actions, along with several smaller tax steps, were required to generate the more than $700 million needed.

"The key this year was to try and maintain last year's figures. New programs and initiatives will have to wait for a better state economy," Shambaugh said.

She said that new dollars will be made available for basic education, community colleges, homeland security, and House of Representatives operations.



Veneman Announces National Fluid Milk Processor Appointments

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Ann M. Veneman announced the appointment of three incumbents and five new members to the National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board.

"We are grateful to these men and women for providing their time and expertise to this board," said Veneman.

Reappointed to serve second terms are Mary Ellen Spencer, Chelsea, Mass., (Region 2); Roger D. Capps, Carlinville, Ill., (Region 8); and Ronald M. Foster, Modesto, Calif., (Region 14).

Newly appointed are Joseph Cervantes, Binghamton, N.Y., (Region 4); James S. Jaskiewicz, Lakeland, Fla., (Region 5); Gary L. Aggus, Springfield, Mo., (Region 11); Lawrence V. Jackson, Pleasanton, Calif., (Region 12); and Charles D. Price, Johnstown, Pa. (at-large processor).

The appointments for regions 4 and 12 expire June 30, 2004 and June 30, 2003, respectively. The appointments for regions 2, 5, 8, 11, 14 and at-large processor expire June 30, 2005.

The National Fluid Milk Processor Promotion Board is composed of 15 fluid milk processors from 15 geographic regions and five at-large members. At least three at-large members must be fluid milk processors and at least one must be from the general public. The board was established by the Fluid Milk Promotion Act of 1990 to develop and administer a coordinated program of advertising and promotion to increase the demand for fluid milk products.

Dairy Checkoff, Import Assessment Focus Of Roundtable

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Mounting legal challenges to agricultural promotion programs were the focus of a recent roundtable discussion sponsored by the Dairy Table Coalition (DTC). The "Legal Challenges to Agricultural Promotion Programs" roundtable for congressional staff and other interested parties was conducted in the U.S. Senate Agriculture Committee hearing room.

The DTC led a delegation of dairy leaders from California, Wisconsin, New York and Vermont who met with senior officials at the White House, the USDA, and the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative (USTR) to voice concerns demonstrating the need for a careful, deliberate approach to implementing the 2002 farm bill's controversial new dairy import assessment. The DTC also met with individual members of Congress and congressional staff to voice similar concerns. DTC Executive Director Mario Castillo said, "If the import assessment is not implemented in a thoughtful and inclusive manner, many producers believe the dairy checkoff program will be exposed to serious new legal challenges similar to the recent federal court ruling which found the beef checkoff to be a violation of farmers' First Amendment rights to free speech."

The DTC roundtable featured a broad spectrum of participants involved in the checkoff program debate. Panelists included Dr. Enrique Figueroa, former USDA deputy secretary for Marketing and Regulatory Programs, the agency responsible for administering commodity checkoffs; Chandler Keys III, vice president for Public Policy, The National Cattlemen's Beef Association, representing beef interests affected by the recent South Dakota federal court ruling against the beef checkoff program; Jodi Niehoff, Government Relations Rep. of the National Farmers Union, whose 300,000 producer members have called for a major review of all agricultural checkoff programs; Laura Phelps, president, American Mushroom Institute, representing mushroom interests affected by last year's U.S. Supreme Court United Foods v. United States decision against the mushroom program; Eric Schippers, executive director, Center for Individual Freedom, the group supporting recent producer lawsuits against the dairy and beef promotion programs; and attorneys Ben Yale and Erik Jaffe, representing plaintiffs in the dairy and beef checkoff lawsuits, respectively.

Castillo said, "The roundtable discussion clearly revealed that the spate of producer lawsuits against the dairy and beef checkoff programs are symptoms of deeper problems with these self-help programs. These programs must be addressed soon in a responsible and open manner by lawmakers and policymakers if checkoff programs are to fill their intended purposes."

Castillo added, "Our follow-up meetings showed that similar potholes exist on the road to implementing the dairy import assessment. There are also major concerns that the import assessment could invite harmful challenges at the World Trade Organization if USDA doesn't properly consult with the U.S. Trade Representative during implementation."

Castillo concluded, "Producers from the leading dairy states asked pointed questions during the White House, USTR, USDA meetings about how the dairy import assessment will affect their farming operations. They want to know about USDA's plans for implementing the dairy import assessment and whether there will be provisions for adequate public notice and comment at every stage of the implementation process. They also called for public hearings and a referendum for any new class of checkoff program participants to bring a needed element of democracy to these programs."

Penn State Professor, Student Write Book On Urban Forestry History

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — A professor and a graduate student in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences have written a book about the historical roots of urban forestry.

Forest genetics professor Henry Gerhold and Stacy Frank, who is now employed by Bartlett Tree Experts, teamed up on the 70-page volume titled "Our Heritage of Community Trees" that includes historical scenes of trees in communities. The book should be appealing not only to North American audiences, but also to readers in Europe and other continents.

The authors uncovered some intriguing findings through a literature search. For example, a series of developments in landscape design spanning more than 300 years in Europe eventually culminated in what we now consider commonplace — street trees.

Voyagers of the seas and the discovery of the "New World" initiated an age of plant exploration and exchange that greatly enriched American and European landscapes, the authors write. But plant dispersion and introduction have been carried on through all ages and in all countries.

"The first record of foreign plant introduction was into Egypt in 1570 B.C.," said Gerhold. "Primitive pruning, fertilizing and pest-control practices were described in English publications in 1597 and 1662; much later they were improved through research and experience in Europe and America."

But it was in America that the urban forestry concept first took root even before the term urban forestry was coined, and later developed into a national movement. "For example, in 1792, citizens of Philadelphia petitioned to have public trees planted, recognizing their healthful effects," said Gerhold. "In 1896 this city hired its first professional arborist with the title Chief Forester — possibly the first urban forester? Other early examples of urban forestry are documented in Georgia, California, Massachusetts, New York, Michigan and other places."

The book's concluding paragraphs challenge readers to take a fresh look at trees in their own communities, and to realize that they can evoke public support and persuade community leaders to build a better tree program.

The book was partially supported by a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture Forest Service, upon the recommendation of the National Urban and Community Forestry Advisory Council, which hopes it will stimulate an appreciation of community heritage of landscape trees, and thus instill an ethic that recognizes their value.

"By informing people of the fascinating history of city trees, tree care practices and community tree programs," said Gerhold, "readers may be inspired and challenged to improve public support for urban forestry programs, and thereby contribute to the strategy for keeping urban forests healthy."

"Our Heritage of Community Trees" may be ordered from Pennsylvania Urban and Community Forestry Council, 56 E. Main St., Mechanicsburg PA 17055 at a cost of $16. Phone (814) 865-3281 for more information.

Farm Group Requests Hearing On Ag Checkoffs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — National Farmers Union recently sent a letter to Senate and House agriculture committee leaders requesting a hearing on agricultural checkoffs. NFU is seeking a comprehensive examination of the function, operation and oversight of the national commodity research and promotion checkoff programs.

"NFU has long been an advocate for checkoff program reforms," said NFU President Dave Frederickson. "Significant diversity exists among checkoff programs, but the basic principles of accountability, effectiveness and producer control must be common among all programs. Currently, there is not an adequate process for producers to voice their concerns."

Checkoff programs have come under increased scrutiny by courts over the last year. Early in 2001, the U.S. Department of Agriculture and the National Pork Producers Council reached a settlement agreement to restructure the pork checkoff program. This followed a long dispute regarding USDA's decision to terminate the pork checkoff program after it was defeated in a producer referendum. A few months later, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the mushroom checkoff program was unconstitutional because it violated First Amendment rights. Most recently a U.S. district court judge in South Dakota ruled that the beef checkoff program was unconstitutional.

Constitutionality of checkoff programs is among a myriad of concerns that stretch across all commodity checkoff programs, Frederickson said. A top concern among producers is that checkoff programs have not been successful in boosting more income for producers. Another general concern is that checkoff programs do not represent independent producers' interests.

In light of these considerations, NFU is encouraging the Senate and House Agriculture committees to examine checkoff programs and consider comprehensive checkoff reforms, including: complete separation of commodity boards and industry membership association activities; competitive bidding procedures for promotion and research contracts; mandatory referenda; voluntary, rather mandatory programs; and mandatory performance reviews.

Reduction In Pork Checkoff Assessment Proposed

WASHINGTON, D C. — Recommended by the National Pork Producers Delegate Body, the USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS) has proposed to decrease the current rate of assessment of 0.45 percent of the market value of porcine animals to 0.40 percent.

The proposal was printed in the Federal Register July 19. Comments, postmarked no later than Aug. 19, 2002, may be sent to Kenneth R. Payne, Chief; Marketing Programs Branch; AMS Livestock and Seed Program, USDA Stop 0251; 1400 Independence Avenue, SW; Washington, DC 20250-0251; telephone (202) 720-1115. Copies of the proposed rule and additional information are available from the same address.

Hess Announces Nearly $35 Million In Growing Greener Grants

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) Secretary David E. Hess recently announced that organizations in nearly every Pennsylvania county will receive a total of $34.2 million in "Growing Greener" grants for projects to improve the environment.

The grants will be used by 239 organizations for watershed restoration, protection and education; technical assistance; and watershed-specialist positions.

"Earlier this year, Gov. Schweiker made a commitment to meet the same level of Growing Greener funding as originally intended, in spite of the fiscal crisis faced by the Commonwealth," Secretary Hess said. "With this announcement of more than $34.2 million in Growing Greener funds, Gov. Schweiker has fulfilled that promise, confirming the value of this innovative program to Pennsylvania's watersheds."

Secretary Hess said the environmental improvements resulting from the Growing Greener grants will include 257 acres of abandoned mines reclaimed, 810 acres of wetlands created or restored, 94 oil and gas wells plugged, 82 miles of streams impacted by acid mine drainage cleaned, 299 miles of riparian buffer planted, 19.5 miles of stream banks improved, and 15 new watershed groups formed.

"In addition, these groups project to leverage these funds by more than $66.5 million," Secretary Hess said. "This almost doubles the dollars invested in Pennsylvania's environmental future and helps to ensure the ongoing efforts from Growing Greener will continue for generations of Pennsylvanians to come."

The grants include $1.7 million to support 58 watershed-specialist positions covering 61 of the state's 67 counties. The watershed specialists help local groups protect and improve their watersheds, provide expert advice to farmers and landowners for conservation practices, work with DEP regional watershed coordinators on all proposals and projects, and help support local Growing Greener projects in their counties.

"Growing Greener represents the next generation of environmental-protection programs — supporting community and watershed-based projects that build partnerships to accomplish their goals," Secretary Hess said. Funding for the Growing Greener program was doubled and extended through 2012 in the state budget recently signed into law by Gov. Schweiker. DEP's portion of Growing Greener funding was increased to $547.7 million from $241.5 million in the original program.

It is now funded primarily through a $4-per-ton tipping fee on solid waste disposed in Pennsylvania's municipal waste landfills. For more information on the Growing Greener program, visit the Pennsylvania homepage at www.state.pa.us, PA Keyword: "Growing Greener."

USDA Revises Fluid Milk Processor Definition

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture recently announced that it is amending certain provisions of the Fluid Milk Promotion Order to conform with the recently enacted Farm Bill.

Under the amendments, the definition of fluid milk product will be modified to be consistent with the term as defined under Federal milk marketing orders. The "fluid milk processor" definition, will be revised to increase the exemption standard from 500,000 pounds to three million pounds per month of fluid milk products that are processed and marketed commercially in consumer-type packages in the 48 contiguous United States and the District of Columbia.

In addition, the exemption standard now excludes fluid milk products that are delivered directly to consumer residences.

The program is financed by a mandatory 20-cent per hundredweight assessment on all fluid milk products processed and marketed in consumer-type packages by fluid milk processors in the 48 contiguous states and the District of Columbia. Under the amendments, fluid milk processors who exceed the exemption standard will be charged the assessment.

Copies of the rule and additional information may be obtained from David R. Jamison, Dairy Programs, AMS, USDA, 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Stop 0233, Washington, D.C. 20250-0233; phone (202) 720-6909.

Lamb Checkoff: Who Makes The Payment?

Robert J. Melchior
Coordinator
Northeast Sheep and Goat Marketing Program
Cornell University

By now most producers are aware of the checkoff program. Who will be responsible for making payments to the fund and how will this be accomplished?

The fund will receive two different types of payments. The first is ½ cent per pound and intended to come from producers (i.e. growers, feeders and seedstock producers). The second is a 30 cent per head charge to be paid by "First Handlers." Both payments will be remitted to the fund by the first handler.

In the most common transactions, where the producer sells a lamb (or sheep) at a salebarn or to a dealer or slaughterhouse, the ½ cent per pound will be deducted from the proceeds of the sale. Note that the producer should receive a statement of the transaction (as provided by the salebarn) showing the checkoff withheld.

Alternatively, in a direct sale, the producer should prepare an invoice showing the name and address of the buyer, date of the sale, number of head sold and the total weight, and total checkoff assessment paid. It probably wouldn't hurt to have the buyer countersign such an invoice. (Actually the regulation requires that the receiver of the checkoff contribution provide the seller with the receipt. However, in the normal course of trade it is the seller that provides the invoice so that listing the checkoff amount as a deduction and then having the buyer sign the copy should accomplish the same goal.)

These documents will be important if you decide to seek a refund of your checkoff contribution. Acceptability of documentation for refunds will be determined by the Lamb Promotion Board when it is established.

A "first handler" is defined in the regulation as "the packer or other person who buys or takes possession of lambs from a producer or feeder for slaughter, including custom slaughter. If a producer or feeder markets lamb products directly to consumers, the producer or feeder shall be considered the first handler with respect to such lambs..."

The first handler is responsible to remit the producer portion of the checkoff, which he received as a reduction in the sale price at the time of purchase. He will also contribute an additional 30 cents per head of his own funds.

The form used to make payments to the fund (form number LS-81, Lamb Promotion, Research and Information Board Monthly Remittance Report) is available on the internet at www.ams.usda.gov/lsg/mpb/lamb/ls81.pdf or can be obtained from the Marketing Programs Branch; Livestock and Seed Program, Agricultural Marketing Service, USDA; 1400 Independence Avenue, SW, Stop 0251, Room 2627-S, Washington, D.C., 20250-0251. Telephone: (202) 720-1115. Forms and remittances are due monthly by the 15th of the month following the sale.

In cases where the producer is selling sheep, lamb or their products to a consumer or retailer, the producer also becomes the first handler. It then becomes the producer's responsibility to remit both charges to the fund.

The Lamb Promotion, Research and Information Order is intended to raise industry funds which will be used to make the industry more resistant to international competition and improve domestic distribution. This will in part be accomplished by opening new markets to lamb and emphasizing the advantages of domestic product.

Distribution of the funds will be administered by a Lamb Promotion Board, members of which will be appointed by the Secretary of Agriculture from nominations made by numerous sheep organizations around the country. The Board will consist of 13 board members including producers, feeders, a seedstock producer and first handlers.

The regulation calls for a referendum to be conducted on the checkoff within three years of the checkoff establishment (July 1, 2002). This will give producers an opportunity to consider the effectiveness of the process and either continue the program or discontinue it. In the meantime, producers will have the right to request refunds of amounts they have paid into the promotion fund.

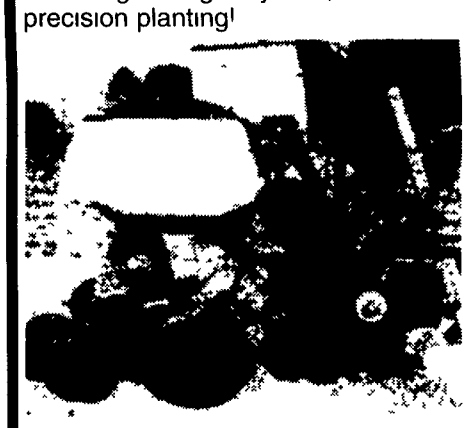
See MONOSEM Twin-Row Advantage On Display at Ag Progress and In Action at Vegetable Demonstration

Proven Tech Knowledge by Monosem Since 1995

Benefits and Features: Twin-row crops are planted with a staggered seed drop, allowing for more growing room and better canopy than standard rows. As a result of the twin row configuration, plants,and their roots, are spread over a larger area The plants catch more sunlight and nutrients, making for healthier, more uniform crops. Monosem helps make this possible with the precision spacing of the patented metering system. That's the Monosem twin-row advantage -- higher yields, reduced seed costs, and precision planting!



Staggered row units on one common toolbar allow for planting twin rows in a single pass. This patent pending design also gives better residue flow and easier hand-ling for transport.

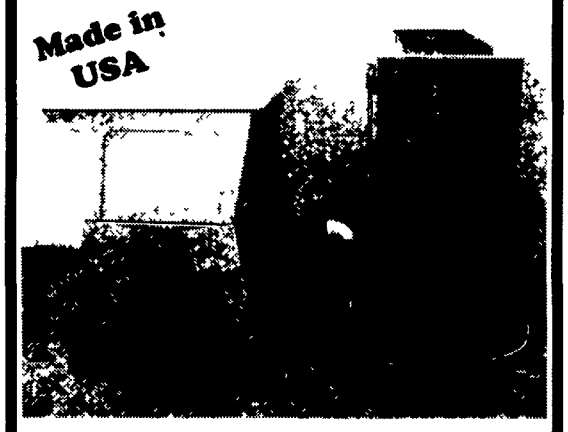
Heat with Corn!



Burn Shelled Corn In This Biomass Furnace
A BETTER ALTERNATIVE
The corn burning furnace has many advantages over wood and coal heat. The large storage bin holds up to 14 bushels of fuel, which is automatically fed into the combustion chamber as needed There's no need to load the furnace several times a day The use of corn also eliminates the bark mess, insects, splinters, and handling problems connected with the use of wood fuel, and the dust and dirt from coal. UL Approved

Students Can Discover Their Future At APD

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — "Discover Your Future Today" is the theme for this year's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22.

Sponsored by Penn State, the event is conducted at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt. 45.

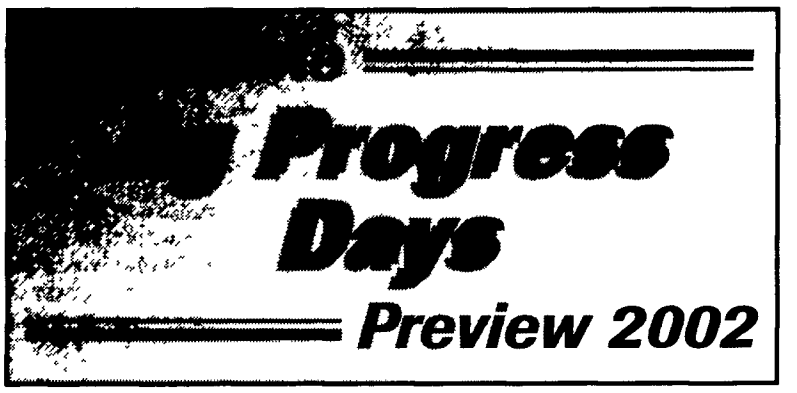
Special exhibits will highlight the educational and career opportunities available to students in the agricultural sciences. Representatives from several academic departments will staff displays illustrating fields of study and the broad range of jobs in agriculture, natural resources, food science, education and other ag-related disciplines.

"Every year, we try to provide something for virtually everyone," said Bob Oberheim, Ag Progress Days manager." As the number of exhibitors and activities continues to grow, we're anticipating perhaps the most diverse show we've ever offered."

More than 350 commercial exhibitors will display the latest goods and services. Interactive displays, guided tours and workshops will show how research and educational programs are addressing important issues, safeguarding our food supply and the environment, and helping to improve the efficiency and profitability of agriculture and related industries.

Faculty and extension staff from the college will be on hand to answer questions and provide information on crops and soils; dairy, livestock and equine production; conservation practices; integrated pest management, woodlot management; farm safety; and home gardening and lawn care. Special workshops will address the impact of the new Farm Bill on Pennsylvania agriculture.

Other activities planned for this year's event include a skid steer rodeo and a special high-tunnel vegetable production tour. Field demonstrations will feature hay mowing, hay rakes and tedders, baling, bale handling, commercial field spraying and deep tillage tools to break soil compaction. In addition, four equipment companies will demonstrate a variety of equipment, such as planters, forage mixers, loaders, bale processors, baggers, and forage platforms.



Rendell To Speak At Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Gubernatorial candidate Ed Rendell will visit Ag Progress Days Wednesday, August 21.

His agenda includes a government luncheon, touring the exhibits, and conducting a press conference at 2 p.m. He will speak on his plan for Pennsylvania's rural communities, noting that rural communities are an integral part of the heritage, character, and economy of the state.

Thanks and Congratulations to

Don't Miss 'The Equine Experience' At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Visitors will be entertained by unique horse performances and will learn about horse ownership, management, and "horsemanship" at the Equine Experience at Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22.

The Equine Experience, conducted by Penn State, the American Quarter Horse Association (AQHA), the Pennsylvania Quarter Horse Association (PQHA) and other breed and industry groups, will offer horse enthusiasts new activities plus several popular attractions from past years.

A highlight of this year's program is the AQHA 4aHORSE Test Ride. The program also will feature breed demonstrations, a learning center with educational displays, AQHA's educational venue, demonstrations and seminars by horse experts. In cooperation with AQHA and PQHA, horses will be available for the public to ride throughout all three days of Ag Progress Days.

"This is a great opportunity for anyone who has always wanted to ride a horse, those thinking about becoming horse owners or current horse owners who want to improve their horsemanship knowledge and skills," said Pat Comerford, Penn State Cooperative Extension horse specialist.

4aHORSE is AQHA's referral service that helps horse enthusiasts find breeders, trainers, riding instructors, horse vacations, and health and maintenance care for horses.

"We're delighted to give horse enthusiasts in the Pennsylvania area a chance to ride American quarter horses," said Bill Brewer, AQHA's executive vice president. "Ag Progress Days gives AQHA a chance to bring together the region's top horse experts in a single place."

"The Equine Experience is a great place to visit with horse business and organization representatives, attend seminars in the learning center and obtain educational information from Penn State, AQHA and other breed and industry experts," said Comerford, who urges everyone to come out and give an American quarter horse a test ride and learn more about horses.

Program topics will include nutrition, management, equine dentistry, preventative veterinary care, selection of the proper horse, horse behavior, handling and training, breed clinics, and much more. Visitors also may participate in a variety of activities including riding, roping, and horse judging.

"The Equine Experience will be of interest to all horse enthusiasts, from potential or new owners and novice riders to experienced horse owners or professionals," said Ann Swinker, associate professor of equine science and extension horse specialist. "This event will showcase Pennsylvania's equine industry and the Penn State Equine Science Program. It is also a safe and exciting way to introduce the public to horses and horse-related activities."

Tuesday, Aug. 20 events will feature Friesian, Haflinger, Icelandic, and other breed clinics; a working sheep dog demonstration; and performances by the Keystone Dressage and Combined Training Drill Team and the Pennsylvania State Police Mounted Patrol. Expert horse trainers also will demonstrate handling and training techniques.

Highlights on Wednesday, Aug. 21 will include an American quarter horse versatility demonstration, Pennsylvania State Police Mounted Patrol performance, and draft horse breed and driving demonstrations, including a six-horse hitch. "We are really proud of the selection of draft and light horses we have gathered together for this year's program. Bringing many breeds together in one place — from Percherons and Belgians to Icelandic and miniature horses — is an event that shouldn't be missed," said Brian Egan, equine extension associate at Penn State.

On Thursday, Aug. 22, the Penn State

ennsylvania Quarter Horse Association 4-H Equine Skillathon will start at 10 a.m. The skillathon is a multi-phase competition that allows young equestrians to demonstrate their skills in a showmanship and horse-judging competition, a written test and a series of identification stations. Other activities on Thursday include a horse-handling and training demonstration and breed clinics, featuring Appaloosas and Friesians.

For more information about the Equine Experience, visit the Penn State Equine Science Website at www.das.psu.edu (click on horses), or contact the Penn State Equine Science Team at (814) 863-7639.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Penn State's Ag Progress Days are held at the Russell E. Larson Agricultural Research Center at Rockspring, nine miles southwest of State College on Rt.45.

Demonstrations Offered At Livestock Area Of Ag Progress

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — New this year at the Animal Sciences Exhibits Area of Penn State's Ag Progress Days, Aug. 20-22, will be a series of demonstrations to give farmers practical information they can use in their operations.

The demonstrations, offered by the departments of dairy and animal science and veterinary science, will include some new approaches and technologies for some old problems, according to Mike O'Connor, professor of dairy science and exhibit coordinator.

"We want to present useful techniques and information that farmers can consider," O'Connor said. "We're also highlighting some new technologies and innovations adaptable to livestock management. There are so many new technologies and concepts, sometimes it's good to have an expert to help you decide what's a real innovation, and what's a flash in the pan."

Demonstrations and presentations will include hoof trimming; the new Penn State Particle Size Separator; Cow Sense — a systematic approach to training dairy workers; using ultrasound technology in the dairy industry, beef cattle reproduction, and livestock evaluation; forage quality and toxins; reducing phosphorus for dairy cows; reading a DHIA report; and maintaining milk flavor.

Demonstrations And Presentations Schedule

Tuesday, Aug. 20:

• 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. — Hoof trimming: A demonstration of hoof trimming for cattle and discussion of hoof health.

• 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. — Penn State Particle Separator: An overview of the new process, with a demonstration on how particle size of forages and total mixed rations is determined. Experts also will address evaluation of samples in relation to a recommended particle size distribution needed by the dairy cow.

• Noon — Potential use of ultrasound in the dairy industry.

• 3 p.m. — Cow Sense: A Systematic Approach to Training Dairy Workers: Demonstration and review of the skills necessary for early detection of problem cows. Penn State's systematic approach to animal observation may be used to train and organize all dairy workers, from experienced to novice.

• Wednesday, Aug. 21:

• 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. — Using Ultrasound Technology in Beef Cattle Reproduction, including pregnancy diagnosis and fetal sexing.

• 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. — Forage Quality and Toxins. Forage is the foundation of any feeding program. Potential problems and how to determine their presence will be discussed. Forage samples will illustrate changes in forage quality and how they impact animal performance. Common forage toxicity problems, including molds, mycotoxins, bacteria, nitrite and others, will be discussed.

• Noon — Reducing phosphorus for dairy cows. New National Research Council phosphorus recommendations will be reviewed. Also, specialists will discuss how reducing phosphorus will affect milk production, reproductive performance, land application and economics.

• 3 p.m. — Instruction on reading a DHIA report. Dairy producers are encouraged to bring their DHIA reports for discussion and evaluation.

Thursday, Aug. 22:

• 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. — Meat animal evaluation using ultrasound to determine body composition of live animals.

• 11 a.m. and 1:00 p.m. — Maintaining Milk Flavor: Consumer acceptance of milk — particularly by children — is greatly affected by flavor. Therefore, producers and others associated with the dairy industry should have full knowledge of the farm factors that have an adverse effect on milk flavor. A hands-on workshop and discussion will allow dairy producers to taste and smell milk with abnormal flavor. Solutions for correcting problems will be presented.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Invasive Weeds And Other Plants Identified At Ag Progress Days

ROCKSPRING (Centre Co.) — Plots of corn, soybeans, hay, and other crops will be growing all around the Crops and Soils Tent at Ag Progress Days Aug. 20-22.

But one of this year's most intriguing crops will be plants that no self-respecting farmer wants to grow.

Beside forage and grain crops, Penn State crop and soil sciences faculty will be growing common weeds of Pennsylvania, including some invasive weed species.

"Invasive weeds are becoming more of a concern to land managers and farmers," said Greg Roth, associate professor of agronomy. "Our display will demonstrate the invasive weeds that are invading crop and forestland around the state. Some of these invasive weeds actually are cultivated species that we should be concerned about escaping into the wild and taking over natural environments.

"There are a lot of new federal regulations being considered for managing invasive weeds on public and private lands, roadsides, and state forests. This year is a departure from our usual Ag Progress Days focus on strictly crop-related items. It's part of a trend to look more broadly at agriculture and how it interacts with other issues — in this case, invasive weeds and natural ecosystems."

The area again will present the latest developments in forage, corn and soybean production. Along with demonstrations of new tillage practices and displays of crop research, Penn State specialists will be on hand to talk to producers about crop-related production issues.

Children will enjoy the new look of the ever-popular "A-Maze-N Corn" exhibit, which features an all-new corn maze design. "The maze is always popular with the youth," Roth said. "We've had about 5,000 kids go through the maze at Ag Progress Days in the past. Children can spend time in the maze while the adults can get advice on weed control, forages, corn, soils, soybeans, and small grains."

The state's best hay also will be on display as part of the annual Hay Show. Visitors wishing to compete in the Hay Show can submit their entries at the drop-off points near the Ag Progress Day's parking areas. Samples are evaluated visually and analyzed for feed value during the event.

Because of concerns over the possible transmission of foot-and-mouth disease and other foreign animal diseases, visitors who have been overseas within two weeks of attending Ag Progress Days are asked not to visit the event's live-animal exhibit areas.

Study To Uncover Best Practices Of Agricultural Easement Programs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — A new study will inform government officials, policymakers and others interested in protecting farmland about the achievements and best practices of publicly funded agricultural conservation easement (PACE or PDR) programs across the nation.

Placing farms under easement by purchasing development rights from landowners, or accepting donated easements for tax benefits, is an increasingly popular technique for protecting farmland from development. The study will focus on the impacts of the 40 most active agricultural easement programs in the nation.

They are located in 14 states, with the largest numbers in Maryland, Pennsylvania and California. Researchers will examine the accomplishments, strategies, impacts and effectiveness of each program through interviews with program managers and other local sources.

The study aims to uncover the public benefits of PACE programs. In particular, the study will determine the extent to which agricultural easement programs have minimized the loss of farmland to urban growth in their communities and helped local agriculture prosper.

"This is a timely issue," said Project Director Alvin D. Sokolow, public policy specialist in the University of California Cooperative Extension on the Davis campus, "considering the $800 million per year in federal dollars recently allocated for agricultural easements through the farm bill."

The National Assessment of Agricultural Easement Programs is a joint project of American Farmland Trust (AFT) and the Agricultural Issues Center of the University of California-Davis, with support from the Natural Resources Conservation Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Co-director is Anita Zurbrugg, assistant director of AFT's Center for Agriculture in the Environment in DeKalb, Illinois.

Other members of the eight-person research team include AFT field staff and expert consultants in the area of farmland protection policy.

The initial findings of the study will be available by the end of the year.

Angus Breeders Sweep Honors At BIF Conference

OMAHA, Neb. — The Beef Improvement Federation (BIF) honored several beef cattle producers and beef industry leaders at their recent 34th Annual Convention, held July 10-13 in Omaha, Neb.

While all of the honorees were selected for their contributions to the beef industry and years of service to the organization, another common bond was their involvement in raising Angus purebred or commercial cattle.

"We couldn't be prouder of the accomplishments this group of breeders and beef industry leaders has made to not only the Beef Improvement Federation, but to the industry in general," says John Crouch, executive vice president of the American Angus Association.

"Angus breeders, both purebred and commercial, have had tremendous influence on the success of BIF and we're proud to have them involved in our organization as well."

Richard McClung, manager of Wehrmann Angus, New Market, Va., was elected to head the organization as president for the coming year. S.R. Evans Jr., Greenwood, Miss., was elected to serve as vice president. Evans was also presented with a Continuing Service Award during the event.

Galen Fink, Fink Beef Genetics, Manhattan, Kan., retired as president of the organization at the convention and was presented with a Continuing Service Award as well.

SARE Funds Study On Free-Range Turkeys

PITTSBORO, N.C. — Funded by the Southern Sustainable Agriculture Research and Education Program (SSARE), the American Livestock Breeds Conservancy (ALBC) is coordinating a study on the production performance and health of standard and industrial varieties of turkeys.

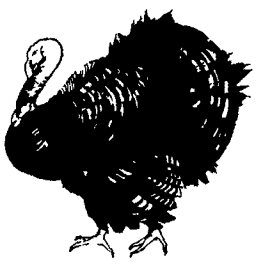
This two-year project will test whether standard varieties of turkeys have superior immune systems and perform better in range-based production systems than industrial stocks. Standard varieties are those recognized by the American Poultry Association (APA).

The American Livestock Breeds Conservancy 1997 census of turkeys found only 8,212 breeding females of seven varieties of standard turkeys. These genomes are in danger of extinction. Limited genetics, like all monocropping systems, makes the whole population vulnerable to outbreaks of disease, market fluctuations, and environmental change.

Researchers at Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University will assess the immunological health and DNA fingerprint these same varieties.

Participants include Gerry Cohn, Matzah Rising Farm, Snow Camp, N.C.; Glenn and Linda Drowns, Sand Hill Preservation Center, Heirloom Seeds and Poultry, Calamus, Iowa; Harry and Gail Groot, Sunrise Valley Farm, Hiwassee, Va.; Paula Johnson, Paula's Produce & Farm, Las Cruces, N.M.; Frank Reese, Jr., Good Shepherd Ranch, Lindsborg, Kan.; Heather Bean Ware, associate director of agriculture and education, New England Heritage Breeds Conservancy at Hancock Shaker Village, Pittsfield, Mass.; and Paul Mueller, Ph.D. and Matt Poore, Ph.D. North Carolina State University, Raleigh, N.C., and the Center for Environmental Farming Systems, Goldsboro, N. C.

The on-farm component of the project began in May 2002 and will be completed in December 2002. Immunological and DNA studies will continue through 2003. The results of the project will be available in late 2003.



PAM Protects Against Pollutants, Pathogens

KIMBERLY, Idaho — An environmentally friendly compound nabs nutrients and troublesome microbes before they can escape from farmers' fields and make their way to ponds, lakes, streams, or rivers.

Known as a polyacrylamide, or PAM, this powder can help keep nutrients such as the phosphorus in fertilizersfrom traveling beyond the farm in irrigation runoff.

Similarly, PAM helps keep disease-causing microbes, like those in cow, pig, or fish manure, from being swept beyond the confines of farmyards or feedlots.

That's according to investigations by ARS scientists with the Northwest Irrigation and Soils Research Laboratory in Kimberly, Idaho. Researchers there are already world leaders in discovering safe, practical, and affordable PAM-based tactics that prevent soil particles from ending up in irrigation water. Without PAM's help, particles can become dislodged when farmers irrigate their fields.

Findings from the team's laboratory and outdoor experiments have prompted U.S. growers to put PAM to work on more than one million acres of irrigated farmland. "Growers who mix PAM with irrigation water can expect to reduce erosion from their furrow-irrigated fields by 80 to 99 percent," says Rodrick D. Lentz, an ARS soil scientist at Kimberly. "One ounce of PAM anchors as much as 1,000 pounds of topsoil that might otherwise be carried away by irrigation water."

New information from ARS soil microbiologist James A. Entry and ARS soil scientist Robert E. Sojka shows that pairing PAM with other compounds boosts its ability to fasten onto nutrients in runoff. "It's a matter of when a nutrient becomes a pollutant," says Entry, in explaining their interest in keeping nutrients in fields. "On the farm, nitrogen and phosphorus are regarded as nutrients plants need to thrive. If these same natural chemicals make their way into water as it leaves the farm, however, they may become pollutants."

Schweiker Administration Announces 20 Farms Approved For Preservation

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — On behalf of Gov. Mark Schweiker, Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes announced that 20 Pennsylvania farms totaling 2,323 acres in 12 counties were approved for preservation by the Pennsylvania Farmland Preservation Board at its July meeting.

Since the start of the program in 1989, Pennsylvania has preserved 234,590 acres on 1,958 farms — just 44 farms short of reaching the "2002 farms in 2002" preservation goal.

"Pennsylvania is leading the nation in farmland preservation," Hayes said. "We need to take every step to preserve agriculture — Pennsylvania's No. 1 industry — for future generations. And we're doing that as we continue to move closer to reaching our farmland preservation goal of protecting 2002 farms by 2002."

Fifty-three counties currently participate in the state farmland preservation program. The commonwealth purchases development rights, referred to as easements, to preserve Pennsylvania's prime farmland and open space.

To learn more about Pennsylvania's nationally recognized farmland-preservation program, contact the Department's Bureau of Farmland Preservation at (717) 783-3167, or visit the PA PowerPort at www.state.pa.us, PA Keyword: "agriculture."

Keeping Cattle Cool Makes Sense

CLAY CENTER, Neb. — During hot summer days, Americans go swimming, drink lemonade, or move inside to air conditioning to cool down. But cattle stay outside, with nothing to cool them. This reduces their growth and efficiency, ARS scientists say.

Researchers at the Roman L. Hruska U.S. Meat Animal Research Center in Clay Center, Nebraska, have new information to help producers recognize when their cattle are stressed by heat and humidity.

Heat waves are usually most severe from mid-June to mid-August, when many cattle are near market weight. In the heat wave of 1997 farmers lost $28 million and in the one of 1999, $40 million, because of cattle deaths and decreased performance.

There are a few ways to observe whether cattle might be heat-stressed. A simple way is to compare the temperature and humidity to a graph to see whether the animal is in the danger area. Recently retired agricultural engineer and biometeorologist G. LeRoy Hahn thinks that "the animal is the best sensor," and respiration rate is a way to measure heat stress.

Cattle lose heat mainly through respiration and, eventually, panting. During hot days, Hahn says, farmers should count the breaths per minute of a few cattle to see if they exceed the healthy rate of 60 to 80.

This can be done with a simple stopwatch, but colleague Roger Eigenberg, an agricultural engineer, has developed a respiration monitor that can be attached securely to the cow to record its breathing rate. This device is currently available only as a research tool.

There are two general ways to help the animal when it's heat-stressed. One way is with a sprinkler system. Agricultural engineer John Nienaber notes that watering should not be done constantly; the animal needs some time to dry before you wet it again because evaporation is what keeps it cool. Also, continued watering creates muddy conditions.

Another way is to provide shade or shelter for the animal, but this can be expensive. Hahn thinks the cost of keeping the animal cool is a form of insurance against death losses in extreme heat waves and that it can save money down the road by improving production even during less-stressing conditions.

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Shelby Rarick, 10, Fleetwood, and 1,180-pound "Kobe" won grand champion placing in the market beef show Thursday.

Rarick, of K and K Show Cattle, brought six head of cattle to Reading Fair and will head to a handful of other county fairs, besides other state competitions with her animals this fall and winter.

The steer came from fellow Reading Fair exhibitor Matt Manbeck, Womelsdorf.

Kobe, named for basketball player, Kobe Bryant, is part of Shelby's "team" of basketball players. For instance, sheep "Iverson" and "O'Neal" and last year a "Bryant" were under Shelby's care for the show ring.

She has been in 4-H for two years but has been showing cattle since she was four years old. She also took home the reserve champion showmanship placing.

Kristy Dietrich, 17, Hamburg, and Shorthorn "Pooh" were reserve champion in the market beef show. The family farm includes 75 feeder steers and 20 brood cows — crossbreds and Limousin cattle.

Kristy, a 4-H and FFA participant with eight years in the show ring, also won champion fitter honors. She brought a heifer and two steers to the show and plans to go onto the Farm Show and Keystone International Livestock Exposition.

In the breeding beef show, Emilie Miller, Womelsdorf, and Hereford homebred ECM5F's Baby 110 won grand champion honors. The heifer has been a class winner in other exhibitions and is part of Emilie's string of cattle, ECM Herefords, which includes 50 animals. Emilie also showed a reserve heavyweight steer in the market beef show.

A senior this year at Tulpehocken High School, she is looking for a college in the western U.S. and hopes to major in agriculture education. As she moves off to school she plans to sell a few of her cattle to help pay for college.

She is the president of the state Junior Hereford Association and a candidate for the national junior board of directors.

She will find out if she has gotten the position at the Hereford industry's PRIDE convention at the end of October in Kansas City. "I'm pretty excited about it," she said. Of eight candidates, four will get positions on the board.

Besides several county fairs, she will exhibit her cattle and sheep at the Farm Show and KILE.

In her 10th year as a 4-H'er, Emilie took home reserve champion fitter honors.

USDA Amends Mideast Milk Marketing Area Pooling Provisions

CLEVELAND, Ohio — An Interim Final Rule for the Mideast Federal milk order has been released by the USDA. The order amends certain pooling provisions of the Mideast Federal milk order on an interim basis, effective Aug. 1. More than the required number of producers in the Mideast marketing area approved the issuance of the interim order in a producer referendum conducted in June.

The Interim Final Rule implements amendments to the Pool Plant provisions which eliminate automatic pool plant status for the six-month period of March through August, eliminate the inclusion of milk shipments to a distributing plant regulated by another Federal milk order as pool-qualifying shipments, eliminate the "split plant" feature, eliminate the inclusion of diversions made by a pool supply plant located outside the marketing area to a pool distributing plant as the supply plant's qualifying shipments, and establish a "net shipments" provision for supply plants.

For the producer milk provisions, this interim order implements amendments that increase the number of days that the milk of a producer needs to be delivered to a pool plant, add August to the "touch base" period, establish year-round diversion limits for producer milk, adjusted seasonally, for distributing plants pooled on the order, and exclude from receipts the diversions made by a pool plant to a second pool plant from the calculation of the diversion limitation.

Dean Foods And Land O'Lakes Expand Alliance

Products Include Lactose-Free Milk, Soy Beverages

DALLAS, Texas and ARDEN HILLS, Minn. — Dean Foods Company and Land O'Lakes, Inc. recently announced a new, expanded strategic alliance and licensing arrangement that will allow Dean Foods to use the Land O'Lakes brand name nationally on a broad range of value-added fluid milk and cultured dairy products, as well as on all basic fluid dairy products. In mid-August 2002, Dean Foods, through its Morningstar Foods subsidiary, will launch Land O'Lakes Dairy Ease lactose-free milk, the first new product resulting from the expanded relationship.

The new agreement is an evolution of a two-year-old joint venture arrangement (Dairy Marketing Alliance) between the two companies designed to leverage the combined strength of Dean Foods position in the dairy case with the history and heritage of the Land O'Lakes brand. The new arrangement grants perpetual, royalty-bearing national licensing rights of the Land O'Lakes brand directly to Dean Foods and includes additional value-added products such as fortified nutritional milks, aseptic products, infant formula, and soy beverages. Dairy Marketing Alliance will be dissolved when the new licensing agreement takes effect on July 31.

"We are extremely enthusiastic about the potential of this expanded relationship," said Gregg Engles, Dean Foods chairman and CEO. "Our Morningstar Foods division, with its fully-integrated marketing resources, offers an ideal platform for launching Land O'Lakes Dairy Ease. We look forward to further leveraging the Land O'Lakes brand to build both new and innovative products."

"The most obvious benefit for Land O'Lakes is that Dean Foods' national, brand-based product development and marketing expertise will be focused on the Land O'Lakes brand," said Jack Gherty, Land O'Lakes president and CEO. "Consumers love and trust the Land O'Lakes brand, a symbol of freshness, quality and 'simple goodness.' Dean Foods will extend the reach and scope of our brand name, which will translate into increased awareness, exposure, strength and vitality for our products."

Silo Unloader Technology Takes a Giant Leap Forward!

BIG JIM Quantum SYSTEM

TOWER SILOS REALLY MEASURE UP!

Measure for measure, nothing beats a tower silo for storing forage. Just compare them to bunkers which have up to 45% storage loss, as well as lower capacity, increased labor and equipment costs and considerable inconvenience. Towers lose just 3% to 7% because of gravity, feed weight and a good unloader like the Big Jim QUANTUM System.

QUANTUM installs in any type of 20' to 30' forage silo conventional or oxygen limited, and makes your tower silo even better!

Snyder Sweeps At Reading Sheep Show

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — "Magoo," once a bottle-fed lamb, and "Normet," an offspring of ram "Norman," took home supreme champion ram and supreme champion ewe placings at the Reading Fair Sheep Show's breeding show for Gene Snyder, Reading. Both are homebred animals and will return to the farm for breeding stock.

Snyder, 11, also had the grand champion market lamb.

With the help of his 3-year-old brother Brian Jacob, Gene feeds and cares for sheep that live 15 mile away on their grandparent's farm.

He is the son of Brian and Doris Snyder.

The boys' grandparents care for the 125-head flock during the week, however during the weekend the boys and their father head to the farm to do the more intense work and care, according to Brian. The operation includes 22 acres.

The flock includes a wide variety of breeds, but all the animals are purebred and registered breeding stock.

Gene will also exhibit animals at Kutztown and Allentown, besides the Farm Show and Keystone International Livestock Exposition. He has also exhibited sheep and Maryland and New Jersey.

His father showed sheep in his teenage years as a 4-H'er and now does the shearing of the flock, depending on Gene to round up and catch the animals.

Cathy Levan, 18, Hamburg, won champion fitting and champion showmanship honors in the sheep show.

In her ninth year in the show ring, she has plenty of experience as she exhibits not only sheep but also cattle and hogs and is a 4-H and FFA participant. The animals are from her family's Meadow Hills Farm, where Cathy grew up, a 50-acre operation. The family rents an additional 300 acres.
